TOLLS REPEAL READY FOR WILSON TO SIGN

Senate Bill Accepted by the House, 261 to 71, Without Going to Conference.

PROTEST BY UNDERWOOD

Twenty Democrats Against Amendment, Thirty-eight Republicans for It—Bill May Be Signed Today.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—By a much larger margin than that by which the original measure was passed on March 31 last, the House accepted today, voting 261 to 71, the Panama tolls repeal bill as amended yesterday in the Senate without the formality of a conference. The increased support for the measure was apparently attributable to the Senate's amendment reserving all canal rights.

Only the President's signature to the bill now remains to make it a law. This probably will be attached tomorrow. Speaker Clark and Vice President Marshall will sign the engrossed bill before it goes to the White House. This perfunctory act could not be done today because of the absence of the Speaker.

Majority Leader Underwood, who had opposed the Repeal bill when it was in the House, voted for the Senate amendment, but in doing so he again declared the legislation to be "a dangerous surrender of American rights."

Republican Leader Mann also voted for the amendment while denouncing the proposal.

The discussion of the amendment lasted nearly two hours, but there never was any doubt as to the outcome.

Representative Moss, Republican, of West Virginia, suggested this amendment to the Senate amendment:

> But it is hereby affirmatively declared that the United States has the right to exempt from payment of tolls for the passage through the canal its vessels of every kind and also those of its citizens, and the absolute sovereignty of the United States over the canal is hereby specifically and positively affirmed.

This was lost by a vote of 174 to 108.

The original repeal bill, without the Senate amendment, passed the House by a vote of 247 to 162, which gave a majority of 85. The vote today was on a motion to concur in the Senate amendment, and the majority was 190. Many Democrats as well as Republicans and Progressives, however, voted for the amendment who were opposed to the repeal of the tolls exemption clause in the Panama Canal act.

Twenty Democrats Oppose.

Twenty Democrats voted against the motion to concur in the Senate amendment. They were Brockson, Broussard, Conry, Deitrick, Donohoe, Driscoll, Dupre, Estopinal, Fitzgerald, Gallivan, Harrison, Kitchin, Lee of Pennsylvania, Mitchell, O'Leary, O'Shaughnessy, Patten of New York, Pelan, Raker, and Reilly of Connecticut.

Thirty-eight Republicans and three Progressives joined the Democrats in support of the measure. They were: Republicans—Bartholdt, Barton, Britten, Burke of South Dakota, Butler, Davis, Dillon, Esch, Frear, Gardner, Gillett, Good, Green of Iowa, Greene of Vermont, Hamilton of Michigan, Lee of Michigan, Hamilton of New York, Haughen, Helgensen, Humphrey of Washington, Johnson of Washington, Kinkaid of Nebraska, La Follette, Lenroot, McKenzie, Madden, Mann, Morgan of Oklahoma, Nelson, Platt, Plumley, Prouty, Slemp, S. W. Smith of Michigan, Steenerson, Stevens of Minnesota, Sutherland, and Volstead. Progressives—Lindbergh, Rupley, and Thomson of Illinois.

Representative Underwood was roundly applauded by members of all parties when he took the floor.

"I feel that the future rights, the future interests, and the future prosperity of more than a hundred million people are at stake and are being jeopardized in the passage of this resolution," he said. "I am not going to resist the adoption of the amendment, because I regard the amendment as a declaration by the Senate of the principles that I believe in. But at the same time I recognize the fact that that declaration is not made effective, and it has not been attempted by those who passed it to make it effective so as to protect the rights of America.

"Is not the original position occupied by the membership of this House that passed this bill far more honest, more manly, far more courageous when they refused to adopt a declaration of this kind and stood on the bald proposition of the committee reporting the bill that we had the right to discriminate in favor of our shipping and that we would not proclaim our right to the sovereignty over the Canal Zone?

Predicts Repeal's Annulment.

In announcing that he would vote for the amendment, Representative Humphrey, Republican, of Washington, predicted that a Republican President would call a special session and that a Republican Congress would "immediately proceed to wipe this un-American monstrosity from the statute books."

Representative Glass, Democrat, of Virginia, rose, he said, to explain the resentment he felt at the "outrageous assaults that have been made upon the President of the United States on the other side of the House and the indignation I feel at the leaders of this side of the House who have aspersed their own colleagues because they would not follow them into the camp of the Republican Party in advocacy of a Republican doctrine."

Mr. Mann, in announcing that he would vote for the Senate amendment, said to the Democrats:

"The issue will be carried to the polls in your district and mine. There is no escape from the proposition that the people are called upon to construe the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. Unless we declare, through the votes which the people will cast at the polls in favor of a construction of the treaty which allows the United States to govern the canal as her own, our children's children, if not our children and ourselves, will bitterly suffer the effects of our action today."

Representative Adamson of Georgia, Chairman of the Foreign and Domestic Commerce Committee, closed the debate.

"Never did our committee propose to give away any right," he said. "Never was the question of battleships passing through the canal involved, and nobody outside of an insane asylum actually believed any such thing, no matter what they might have said. Our committee reported a bill for the government of the canal just as though there had been no treaty, and we pleaded for an opportunity to open the canal and see if it would pay expenses. We pleaded with these special interests to keep their hands off the throat of the enterprise, so that in after years if we saw a mint there, with money overflowing, Congress could decide whether the shipping interests were the most meritorious beneficiaries or not."

HOODLUMS ATTACK FUNERAL

Panels of Hearse and Carriage Windows Broken and Mourners Injured.

Young Italians employed in a clothing factory at Glenmore Avenue and Berriman Street, East New York, who were out for an hour's breathing-time during the heat of yesterday afternoon took the occasion to jeer at the members of a funeral procession passing through the street on its way to a cemetery in Queens.

The first insults led to others and finally the youths began to throw stones. When a rock shattered the glass panels of the hearse, in which was the body of a young woman, the drivers jumped down and entered the crowd, using the butts of their whips. The male mourners joined them, and soon there was a lively fight, people in the streets taking sides according to race.

The reserves of the Liberty Street station under Seargent Rafsky found nearly two thousand persons choking the street when they arrived and had a hard time restoring order. A number of persons, including two women mourners, were injured, the latter by glass from broken carriage windows. The police finally arrested four young Italians, all of whom had to be treated for cuts and bruises by an ambulance surgeon of the Bradford Street Hospital before they were put into cells. The members of the funeral procession who were hurt were treated in a drug store by a neighboring physician, and the trip to the cemetery was resumed.

BRADY INJUNCTION IN DOUBT

Order in Relation to Little Heiress Returnable Today.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, June 12.—Albany is speculating tonight over tomorrow's developments in the court order obtained by D-Cady Herrick, restraining E. Palmer Gavit from taking his 7-year-old daughter, Marcia Ann Gavit, out of the State. The order is returnable before Justice Rudd tomorrow, and although it has been announced that a settlement of the differences between Mr. Gavit and the Brady family have been made out of court there is a feeling in some quarters that further legal proceedings will follow.

The general belief here is that Mrs. Anthony N. Brady, the grandmother of the little heiress, wishes to keep the child in her custody. Mr. Gavit had his daughter out for an automobile ride today and reiterated his statement that the court order never was served on him, and that he would not relinquish his guardianship of the child.

Marcia Ann's mother was killed in the Westport wreck on the New Haven Railroad in September, 1912, and by the will of her grandfather, Anthony N. Brady, the child is to receive one-sixth of his fortune. The income of Marcia Ann's share was to be used in her care and education, and after such expenditure the balance was to be divided into two equal parts, one of which was to go to her father, and the other part to accumulate for the child until she reached her majority.

Mr. Brady in fixing the amount of the allowance directed the Trustees "to consider the station in life of my granddaughter, desire being that she shall be amply and liberally provided for in every way." The Trustees and executors are The Central Trust Company of New York and the two sons of Mr. Brady, Nicholas F. Brady and James Cox Brady.

AMUNDSEN AN AIR PILOT.

Explorer Qualifies After Escaping Death in Aeroplane Accident.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CHRISTIANIA, June 12.—Capt. Roald Amundsen, who for the last two months has been assiduously practicing aeroplane flying, to enable him to use this means of traveling on his coming north pole expedition, qualified for a pilot's certificate last night at the military camp near Christiania.

An officer of the flying corps first took him on a preliminary flight around the course, showing him what tests were required. Suddenly the elevator broke and the aeroplane fell, nose downward, to the ground, a distance of forty feet. Amundsen escaped unhurt, and the officer was only slightly bruised, but the aeroplane was completely wrecked.

The explorer immediately afterward went up in another machine and carried out the tests required for a certificate.

BOY INVENTS FLYING BOAT.

Cornelius Vanderbilt Interested in New Type of Machine.

Special to The New York Times.

CONCORD, N. H., June 12.—Boxed, crated, and heavily wrapped with building paper and canvas to prevent too close inspection by inquisitive persons, a flying boat of odd construction was shipped from here to Muskoka Lake, Canada, today. If it meets the expectations of its inventor, it will revolutionize the construction of air craft and make traveling through the air perfectly safe.

The inventor of the boat is A. M. O'Neill of Pittsburgh, a fifteen-year-old student of St. Paul's School, who with Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., and Cornelius Vanderbilt, Sr., constructed the machine here. The main planes have a spread of 38 feet and are 6 feet in width. These are constructed from a design original with O'Neill, and while of the lightest possible construction they are of great strength. The elevator plane, 20 by 4 feet, is placed between the main wings, and the rudder is in front of and above the centre plane.

The main stabilizer is a vertical plane in the stern of the boat, so placed as to act as a brake against the air in any sudden tilt of the craft and to always keep the machine in an upright position. The main planes are also so constructed as to work automatically to prevent the craft from capsizing or tilting at any dangerous angle. The total weight of the boat equipped for service will be 1,500 pounds and it will have a lifting capacity of 800 pounds above its own weight.

Two Killed in Santa Fe Wreck.

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., June 12.—Two passengers were killed and several persons injured at Bagdad, Cal., nine miles east of Barstow tonight when an Atchison Topeka & Santa Fe Passenger Train No. 4, east bound, ran into an open switch.

PIGEON BRINGS NEWS OF BALLOON WRECK

Struck by Lightning, Capt. John Berry Injured and Still Lost with Aide.

ANOTHER HIT BY BOLTS

But Lands Safely—Two of Four in Portland Race Not Yet Reported.

Special to The New York Times.

PORTLAND, Ore., June 12.—A carrier pigeon fluttered into the Oregon Homing Club this afternoon bearing this message:

"Million Population balloon struck by lightning. Berry badly hurt. Lost in woods. Morrison, Aide."

The message was the first news here that disaster had befallen the mammoth balloon of The Million Population Club of St. Louis, which started in the balloon race from this city at 4 P. M. yesterday, and that Capt. John Berry, the aeronaut, was injured and lost somewhere in the forests, probably of the Cascade Mountains, with George Y. Morrison of Portland, who accompanied him on his flight.

It is believed that the two men are somewhere in the dense forests on the west slope of the Cascades southeast of this city.

The balloon was traveling in this direction at a high elevation when last seen by Capt. Honeywell in the balloon Uncle Sam, as the last-named gas bag was landing seven miles southeast of Oregon City at 7:30 o'clock last night, after having been partly wrecked by an electric storm.

Dr. W. E. Stewart, who accompanied Capt. Honeywell, said today it was his opinion the disaster may have come to Capt. Berry in the same storm which struck them.

Capt. Berry was seen to release much of his ballast in an effort to obtain an elevation above the storm, and it is considered likely that he was unable to obtain an elevation sufficient to take him over the Cascade Mountains. Messages have been sent in every direction by telephone, telegraph, and every other available means of communication to all parts of the State, in an effort to obtain some information regarding the location of the lost aeronauts.

It is believed the balloon landed a long distance from Portland. When the carrier pigeon bearing the message arrived at its cote this afternoon it was very tired and its feathers were drenched, showing that it had passed through a hard storm.

The Kansas City, piloted by Capt. John Watts, with Roscoe Fawcet as aid, and the Springfield, with Roy Donaldson and Wilbur Henderson in charge, were at the same time seen by the Uncle Sam rapidly traveling south near the foothills, about five miles from Oregon City.

In each of the balloons three carrier pigeons from the Oregon Homing Club were carried. These were to be released at intervals. Three of these birds returned last night. One had no message, another was from Donaldson's balloon and was released at 6 P. M. The message gave the information that the craft was at an elevation of 3,600 feet and that a mild thunderstorm had been encountered. The third was from Capt. Honeywell's balloon and was released shortly before his descent.

This morning a fourth pigeon arrived with his tail feathers torn out and no message. It is believed this bird was from Capt. Berry's craft.

OREGON CITY, Ore., June 12.—Capt. H. E. Honeywell of St. Louis, pilot of the balloon Uncle Sam, who arrived in Oregon City today after spending the night at a farmhouse near here, told a graphic story of his flight through a storm with Dr. E. W. Stewart after ascending from Portland yesterday.

The ascent was his 195th, and the experience he had in a heavy electrical storm was the first of its kind.

"After traveling four hours from Portland," he said, "we dropped to the 500-foot level and tried to run in between two storms, which were east and west of us. Soon we were in a great vortex, the storm from the west going southerly and that from the east going northerly.

"The counter-current forced us back. Finally the two storms merged overhead like a canopy, with lightning playing between them. We decided to take advantage of the north drift and back out.

"At this time the first bolt of lightning struck us. We could feel the shock, for it vibrated through our bodies like a current of electricity from a voltage machine. It was especially noticable in our hat bands, which, of course, were moist. We trailed, not thinking of danger, in a northerly direction, and five minutes later a heavy bolt struck us, causing fire to rise from the rigging. The shock sped through our bodies, terminating in the ground through our trail rope which made a perfect conductor, being wet. We decided that this was too interesting for comfort and concluded to land, but before a suitable place presented itself, we were struck again by a light bolt, causing us to make a hurried descent on the Lindsey farm at 7.45 o'clock.

"We came down in a peach orchard, just as a bolt of lightning struck a large dead tree within forty yards of us and set fire to it."

LIVED ON FORGED CHECKS.

Young Man Posed as a Son of Wealthy Parents.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, June 12.—After several weeks of persistent work, Inspector John F. Linton brought a young man of excellent appearance into headquarters today. He described himself as Earl E. Barnes, 27, of New York, and, according to the police, admits having forged a number of checks for amounts from $5 to $20 and having passed them in nearly every hotel and department store in the city.

Barnes was found at Nanisksa Beach, where, for a week or more past, he has been living in fine style. He spent money lavishly, it is said, and had no difficulty in passing himself off as the son of wealthy parents. According to the police, Barnes is wanted at a number of places throughout the country. All the bad checks passed in this city bore the name of H. J. Holmes, the police say.

ROOSEVELT UPSETS PAGE'S LUNCHEON

Asks the Ambassador to Invite Guests After Places at Table Have Been Filled.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 12.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt, who arrived in Paris from Madrid tonight at 9 o'clock, and after a three hours' rest at Ambassador Myron T. Herrick's house started for London, where he arrives tomorrow morning, already has created a mild disturbance in this city.

He is to be entertained at luncheon by Ambassador Page tomorrow, and the story goes tonight that the Ambassador is greatly perplexed by the fact that after he and Mrs. Page had sent out invitations to as many guests as the dining room at 6 Grosvenor Square would hold comfortably a letter was received from Col. Roosevelt saying he would like to meet at luncheon so and so, and enumerating a list of persons sufficiently numerous to make it impossible for the Ambassador to accommodate them in addition to his own previously invited guests unless he sets up a second table in the drawing room.

Mr. Page is in a quandary. He would like to please Col. Roosevelt, but is unable to cancel his own invitations.

The full text of the letter written to Col. Roosevelt by Capt. Candido Rondon relative to Henry Savage Landor's expedition to Brazil has reached London from THE NEW YORK TIMES Madrid correspondent, who obtained it from Col. Roosevelt. As already indicated by the Colonel, Capt. Rondon's letter is a deliberate charge that Mr. Landor did not explore any new territory in Brazil. Col. Roosevelt, it is said, intends to present Capt. Rondon's letter to the Royal Geographical Society as proof of Mr. Landor's duplicity.

A Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society to whom THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent submitted the document today said it threw an interesting sidelight on Mr. Landor's claims but had no direct bearing on the Colonel's explorations.

Rondon addresses Col. Roosevelt as "your friend and admirer," and throughout the epistle betrays an evidence of partisanship which geographers are not likely to consider scientific data.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Saturday, June 13.—The London Times, in an editorial this morning on Col. Roosevelt's visit to London, says:

"Col. Roosevelt may always be sure of a hearty welcome to England, because England knows and loves a man when she sees him, and this man has not only proved that he is rich in the qualities of mind and character we most admire, but has shown himself a good friend to this country.

"He comes among us not as a political leader but as a traveler and explorer, and, above all, as a great American citizen. In that capacity our welcome must be all the warmer because he reaches our shores on the day after the United States Senators have given us proof of their sense of justice and self-respect by voting to repeal the clause of the Panama Canal act which exempted American coastwise shipping from the payment of tolls.

"For that step credit in the first place is due to Col. Roosevelt's political rival, President Wilson, who has shown rare political courage in risking his influence with his party by firmly insisting upon a course which he held that honor and good faith demanded of him. We are confident, however, that it will commend itself to all the best American opinion, whether Republican or Democratic, for that opinion desires to do what is right and fair, and rejoices when in so doing it can help to draw the two great English-speaking nations nearer together."

PARIS, June 12.—Col. Rondon's report on the Landor exploration trip says Mr. Landor applied to the Brazilian Government for an astronomer, a botanist, a zoologist, and a geologist, and an escort of fifty soldiers, with a field gun for protection in case the explorer was attacked by Indians. This latter request was refused, it being pointed out to Mr. Landor that it was illegal to kill or to interfere with the Indians.

Col. Rondon says Mr. Landor then requested a subsidy of over $40,000 from the Brazilian Government, asserting that several Governments had put large sums at his disposal for explorations, notably the United States for his work in the Philippines. Col. Rondon says he finally agreed to accept $10,000.

Col. Rondon, who was asked by the Brazilian Government to help Mr. Landor in every way, said he mapped out an itinerary for Mr. Landor worthy the name of the explorer-martyr of Tibet." The explorer set out with introductions to the local Governors. At Goyaz he was allowed by the Governor to take four policemen from that district to Daiamanto, State of Matto Grosso.

From there, according to Col. Rondon, Mr. Landor took the old commercial route to Santarem, as far as Sao Manoel. There he obtained a guide, but the two men got lost in the forest and returned to Sao Manoel after five days. Then Mr. Landor went down the Tapajos River to Sao Luiz, where he took a steamboat to Manaos, wiring the Geographical Society from Santarem that he had accomplished his purpose of crossing the wilderness of Brazil to the Madeira River. This was equivocal, according to Col. Rondon, as it failed to explain his route.

INCOME TAX FALLS SHORT $23,000,000

But Secretary McAdoo Hopes for Surplus in Revenues Amounting to $30,000,000.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—A digest of the receipts and disbursements of the Government in the current fiscal year as the close of the year approaches make it appear, according to Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, that notwithstanding the fact that receipts in several items have been far less than estimated, a surplus of $30,0000,000 is in sight. The total estimated disbursements for the year were $736,000,000. The actual receipts for ten months and estimated for the whole year amount to $733,000,000, while the total ordinary disbursements amount to $703,000,000.

In the estimates for receipts a year ago the total assessments against corporations were $2,400,000 in excess of actual collections, while personal income tax assessments fell below estimates by the sum of $23,250,000. It ic believed that much of this discrepancy is due to the evasion of the income tax and inaccurate returns due to the difficulties encountered in putting the law into effect in its first year of operation. Secretary McAdoo, in discussing the financial outlook for the Government, says:

"I have gone carefully over the last estimate of ordinary receipts and disbursements for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, and if all the assessments under the personal income tax are paid before June 30 the surplus will be probably $30,000,000. It is very possible, however, that a large sum due for income taxes may not be paid until a few days after June 30, in which event the estimate will be reduced accordingly, as such payments will be credited to the fiscal year ending June 30, 1915.

"Up to June 10 the Treasury has received over $276,000,000 from customs and for the year it will probably reach $291,000,000, an excess of $21,000,000 over the original estimate.

"The ordinary internal revenue receipts will probably be about $311,000,000—a decrease of about $1,000,000 from the original estimate.

"The additional internal revenue receipts, comprising the corporation excise tax for two months of the year, and the corporation and personal income tax for ten months of the year, will probably amount to about $75,000,000. The total assessments to date against corporations is between $43,000,000 and $44,000,000—about $2,400,000 in excess of the estimate. The personal income tax assessments to date are $30,750,000, which is $23,250,000 less than the estimate. The total assessment on corporations and individuals will be at least $75,000,000.

"It should be remembered in this connection that the personal income tax under the law was collected for only ten months of the last calendar year.

"The miscellaneous receipts will probably be about $56,000,000, a decrease of about $3,000,000 below the estimate.

"The ordinary disbursements of the Government are now estimated at $703,000,000—a little over $1,000,000 in excess of the original estimate.

"Summing up: The total ordinary receipts are estimated at about $733,000,000 and the total ordinary disbursements at $703,000,000, leaving an estimated surplus for the fiscal year of about $30,000,000. As stated above, some of the personal income tax receipts may not be received until early in July, and this will proportionately cut down the above surplus.

"This surplus will be absorbed by the Panama payments, which are estimated at $37,000,000 for the year.

"The department is convinced that many liable to the income tax have failed to make returns and that many have made inaccurate returns. Active steps will be taken to discover all evasions of the law, and a large additional amount of income tax will be collected from these delinquents."

WIND DRIVES OFF HOT WAVE.

Cooler Weather Promised for Today and Tomorrow.

The uncomfortably hot weather of the last three days ware broken yesterday afternoon when the wind veered from the southwest to the northwest and increased from fifteen to thirty miles an hour. At 1:45 P. M. the temperature was 89 degrees, by 6 o'clock it had dropped to 84, and at 11 it was 72 degrees.

The humidity was 67 per cent. at 8 A. M., which made the heat very oppressive. In the narrow streets downtown the thermometers registered as high as 98 degrees. There is a difference of 420 feet between the street level and the United States Weather Bureau on top of 17 Battery Place.

The forecaster said that there would be cooler weather today and tomorrow and so far there were no more heat waves in sight. The thunderstorms, promised for yesterday over New York, did not occur locally, but they were in the district all around the city, according to the forecaster, and that helped to cool the air, as well as the northwest winds.

The hottest place in America yesterday was Richmond, Va., where the temperature rose to 100 degrees.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Withering heat in many cities of the central valleys the first four days of the week was succeeded today by cooler weather, nearly everywhere except along the Atlantic Coast from Boston southward, where relief is expected tomorrow. Richmond, with a temperature today of 100, and Atlanta, with 98, equaled their high records for June.

Montgomery, Ala., had a temperature of 100; Washington, 95 degrees; Philadelphia, 94; Bristol, 90, and New York, 88. Chicago had a temperature of 70, a drop of 20 degrees from yesterday.

YOUNG ZIEGLER PAYS $375,000 TO SISTER

Settles Miss Brandt's Claim Against Foster Father's Millions with Interest.

SUIT WAS UP FOR THIS WEEK

Second Compromise Since He Inherited Estate—Sister Lost One Case in Court.

The last of the litigation against William Ziegler, Jr., since he inherited an estate of $16,000,000 from his foster father, was settled out of court yesterday when he drew a check for $375,000 to the ofder of his sister, Miss Florence Louise Brandt, a school teacher at Davenport, Iowa.

Ziegler and his sister, who were adopted by the late William Ziegler in 1896, are the children of George Brandt of Chicago, half brother of the elder Ziegler. In May, 1913, the late Mayor Gaynor, who was one of the administrators of the estate, was served with papers in an action brought by Miss Brandt for an equal share with her brother in the fortune.

At the time of the adoption, she set forth in her complaint, her foster father had agreed to make her and her brother joint heirs, but in 1902, under an agreement made by her parents and Mrs. Ziegler and her husband, the late William Ziegler, the adoption was legally abrogated.

After beginning her suit Miss Brandt began proceedings to have the abrogation of the adoption made invalid. The higher courts decided against her. She then began another action through Patton & Patton, 40 Wall Street, for $250,000, which she said her foster father had agreed to give her in the event of her graduating with honors in a school at Davenport.

Ziegler died in May, 1905, and she graduated the following year. This action was on the calendar in Part 3, Special Term of the Supreme Court, for trial this week before Justice Giegerich.

Young Ziegler's reasons for settling were announced yesterday in this statement by his attorneys, Swan & Moore, of 31 Liberty Street:

> Mr. Ziegler was informed that shortly before his father's death his father (Ziegler) had stated that if his sister, Florence, graduated from the school she was attending in Davenport with honor he would give her $250,000. Mr. Ziegler's sister did graduate with honor, but after the death of his father, in accord with the wishes of his father he gives her, in addition to the $250,000, the interest she would have obtained if the money had been given to her in 1906, making $375,000.

This is the second claim against the estate which has been settled out of court. Mrs. E. Matilda Ziegler, widow of the baking powder manufacturer, received an annual income of $50,000 under the will. She began suit in August, 1905, to upset the will on the ground that her husband did not possess the requisite mental qualifications for making a will at the time he executed it. Young Ziegler was then 14 years old, and was living with his mother. John D. Lindsay, his legal guardian, acting in his behalf, petitioned the court to permit a compromise settlement whereby the widow would receive in cash $1,200,000 and stock of the Royal Baking Powder Company, amounting to $1,300,000. This was approximately $625,000 more than she could have received through her income for fifteen years.

While young Ziegler and his foster mother always lived together on friendly terms, his sister alleged in her complaint that the abrogation of her adoption was due to a hostile attitude of Mrs. Ziegler toward her.

The late William Ziegler's estate here and in Connecticut amounted to about $20,000,000. He had become interested in the search for the North Pole and had contributed to two polar expeditions. After his death his executors paid $23,274, part of the cost of the "dash for the pole," made by Anthony Fiala, and the subsequent expedition to his relief, which was headed by the private secretary of Ziegler, William S. Champ, who sailed on June 1, 1905.

Young Ziegler had shared in the interest of his father in arctic research and the ambition to have a part in the discovery of the pole, and it was expected the young man would resume this work after the death of his foster parent. Aside from his business affairs, for which he maintains an office at 527 Fifth Avenue, his interest has been partly devoted to theatrical matters. He recently invested in a theatrical enterprise with financial success. His theatrical inclinations were shown when he was a freshman at Columbia University, when he wrote a musical comedy and took part in its presentation in the ballroom of the Plaza.

On Dec. 11, 1912, Ziegler was married to Miss Gladys Virginia Watson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Curry Watson. They live at 40 West Fifty-seventh Street. He is now 23 years old. In two years he will receive the second quarter of the total of his estate, which has increased more than $5,000,000 in interest alone. Within the next ten years he will have possession of the entire estate.

PITTSBURGH STRIKE GROWS.

1,500 Union Switch and Signal Workers Join Westinghouse Men.

PITTSBURGH, June 12.—The refusal of the Westinghouse Companies yesterday to treat with their 10,000 strikers was answered today, when the Allegheny Congenial Industrial Union called out the 1,500 men in the plant of the Union Switch and Signal Company at Swissvale. The strike was scheduled for noon, and a parade of East Pittsburgh strikers was formed at 9 o'clock to encourage the movement. With five bands, one of them made up of bagpipers, fully 5,000 men and women marched to the Union Switch and Signal Works, arriving there as the men were being dismissed for luncheon. Many of them at once joined the strikers. Leaders of the union who took their names said there were approximately 1,500 of them.

"We had about 2,200 men on the payroll this morning before the Westinghouse strikers arrived, and about half that number came back this afternoon," said H. G. Prout, General Manager of the switch company. "Their action seems to have been spontaneous, and it came without any notification to me. They have not asked to have their union recognized nor have they presented any other demands."

LET HUERTA GET WAR TOOLS

Bryan Ordered Gun-Repairing Outfits Released at Vera Cruz.

VERA CRUZ, June 12.—On the return here today from Puerto Mexico of the French Line steamer Flanders it became known that a shipment of tools and metals, valued at $100,000 and intended for the manufacture of war materials, had been picked up from the customs warehouse here by the Flanders and taken to Puerto Mexico and there delivered yesterday to the Mexican Government to which it was consigned. The delivery was made on instructions from the State Department against the protest of Collector Stickney.

The shipment was composed of 380 cases of copper bars, files, and metals, especially prepared for repairing rifles and field guns. It was shipped from France on the Dutch steamer Andyk, which arrived here April 22, the day after the occupation of Vera Cruz by the Americans. The Andyk took this part of her cargo to Galveston, where it was transferred to the steamer City of Mexico and reconsigned to Vera Cruz, where it was finally brought and stored in the customs warehouse.

When the Flanders arrived here recently Collector Stickney received instructions from the State Department to permit the shipments under the original billing to the Mexican War and Navy Department by way of Puerto Mexico.

LIPTON FINED FOR SPEEDING

Shamrock IV. So Fast He Didn't Notice Auto's Pace, He Says.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SOUTHAMPTON, June 12.—Sir Thomas Lipton was fined $50 here today for furious automobile driving.

He caused much amusement by observing that he had been traveling so quickly on the Shamrock IV. lately that he did not realize he was exceeding the speed limit.

PLEDGES JAPAN'S AMITY.

Friendship for America Never Will Be Broken, Says Kurol.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 12.—A prediction of unbroken friendship between the United States and Japan was made here yesterday in a speech by Vice Admiral Kurol, commanding the visiting Japanese cruisers, the Asama and the Azuma.

"I believe the friendship established so long between my country and the United States will never be broken," said the Admiral. "We have too many interests in common ever to be anything but the best of friends. My country and countrymen appreciate the friendship of the United States to the fullest extent."

PREDICTS WORK FOR ALL.

Secretary Wilson Planning to Send 80,000 Laborers to Wheat Fields.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Predicting that within a month there would be more jobs in the United States than men to fill them, Secretary Wilson today said he hoped to solve the problem of sending men to points where they were needed.

His forecast was based upon the bumper wheat crop, the revival of the iron trade, mining, and the textile industry. The Secretary of Labor has already received requests for more than 80,000 laborers in the wheat belt of the West and South, and he plans to arrange with the railroads special excursions from the East to take the men to the wheat fields.

TILLMAN GETS CHILDREN.

Senator Gains Their Custody Over Protest of Son's Divorced Wife.

COLUMBIA, S. C., June 12.—The two children of Benjamin R. Tillman, Jr., and Mrs. Lucy Dugas, his divorced wife, will be put in the custody of their grandparents, United States Senator and Mrs. B. R. Tillman, during the months of July and August, according to a decision made by the State Supreme Court yesterday.

Senator Tillman asked the court to put the children in his charge while their father was in Canada. Mrs. Dugas opposed the plan and contested the matter in court.

The court refused to take up the question of support raised by counsel for Mrs. Dugas. Under a former ruling of the court custody of the children is divided between their parents.

McREYNOLDS SCORES PRESS

Says Certain Papers Selfishly Misrepresent Government's Work.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 12.—Attorney General McReynolds, addressing the Tennessee Bar Association here today on "The Government's Law Business," said that one of his most arduous and disagreeable duties was to superintend the publicity of the work of the Administration, of which he was a part, so that the people might know what the Government was doing.

"Those not in direct touch with the situation have no idea to what extent certain portions of the press will go to misrepresent the work of the various departments at Washington, in order to subserve their own interests," he said.

This situation, he predicted, would soon present one of the most serious problems for the best statesmen of the coming Administrations to solve.

Mr. McReynolds was the guest today of the Bar Association at a luncheon and reception.

Other entertainments are planned for his stay, which will continue into next week, when he will attend the meeting of the Vanderbilt University Board of Trustees, of which he is a member.

LASSEN'S PEAK BOILS OVER.

Sends Steam and Rocks High in Air —Fear for Men on Mountain.

Special to The New York Times.

RED BLUFF, Cal., June 12.—Lassen's Peak sent up a tremendous column of steam, smoke, ash, and rock this afternoon. The debris descending covered the whole upper part of the mountain with mud and stones. A party of eight men was on the Peak at the time and grave fears are felt for the safety of six of them. Two had turned back at the base of the main peak and now are safe at Mineral.

The party included Forest Ranger R. H. Abbey, Bert Hampton of Mineral, Walter Gosney, Walter Stoll, and Floyd Buffum of Red Bluff, H. J. Cook of Los Molinos, W. H. Boyer, a newspaper correspondent, and Ayers, a moving picture operator of San Francisco.

Gosney and Boyer turned back at Lake Helen at the foot of the main peak and saw the explosion from that point. The explosion occurred at 3:46 o'clock. It has been explained that the explosions which recently have occurred at Lassen's Peak are due to snow melting and the formation of steam in the so-called crater of the mountain.

DELEGATES ADOPT ONE PEACE PLANK

Carranza's Belated Offer to Send Delegates Fails to Check Niagara Conference.

ENVOYS WON'T ADMIT THEM

But Unofficial Meetings with American and Huerta Agents to Reach Agreement Likely.

WASHINGTON IS OPTIMISTIC

Although Carranza's Note Ignores Armistice Condition and Simply Names Three Representatives.

Special to The New York Times.

NIAGARA FALLS, June 12.—The A B C envoys, the American delegates, and the Mexican delegates today drafted in the form of an official protocol the first plank of the Mexican peace agreement. This plank provides that a provisional Government should be established in Mexico on a date to be fixed prior to the ending of the conference, if the A B C negotiations were successful.

This was the one positive development of a day in which two negative matters had their specific interest. One of these was the decision of the Mexican delegates to refrain from pressing the Antilla affair any further and the other was the evidence given that the mediators were as firm as ever in the determination not to receive Gen. Carranza's delegates unless they brought assurances from their chief that hostilities against the Mexican Federal Government would be suspended, pending the outcome of the peace movement and that he subscribed to the other terms upon which the American and Huerta Governments were participating in the negotiations here.

The announcement from Saltillo that Gen. Carranza had responded to the renewed invitation of the mediators to participate in the peace conference had no appreciable effect on the situation here. It was said in an informal way that the mediators would not modify their position, as set forth in the correspondence wtih Gen. Carranza and Mr. Zubaran, his Washington agent. Up to a late hour tonight the mediators had not received Carranza's reply, said to have been mailed to them from Washington this morning after being telegraphed from Saltillo.

Won't Let Delegates in Conference.

THE TIMES correspondent learns that the present feeling of the mediators is that they do not care to receive oral representations from any emissary of Carranza who may be sent to Niagara Falls. They prefer that he communicate with them in writing, leaving them to determine whether any purpose, valuable to the peace negotiations, would be served if he were received.

The mediators are unanimous in their determination not to permit a Carranza representative to participate officially in the conference if the conditions set forth by them were not met. That is the situation today with regard to the effort of Gen. Carranza to have his interests cared for in the Niagara Falls negotiations, and there does not seem to be the slightest prospect that the mediators will change that attitude. For the time being, at least, the American delegates, realizing this, have ceased their efforts to persuade the mediators to permit Constitutionalist participation without conditions.

Unofficial word reached here tonight that the Carranza delegates would not ask to be admitted to the mediation conference, but would seek to obtain participation in the effort to perfect a pacification plan by conferring informally with the American and Mexican delegates. To such an arrangement the mediators will make no objection, as it does not affect their refusal to admit Carranza representatives to the formal negotiations.

It goes without saying that the American delegates will confer with the Constitutionalist emissaries. What course the Mexican delegates will take, if the revolutionary agents make advances to them, has not been determined. Their answer tonight to inquiries on the subject was that they had given no consideration to the matter and could not say what they would do.

First Plank of Peace Agreement.

The protocol of agreement, drafted and approved today by all the parties to the conference, represented the result of yesterday's long discussion between the mediators and the two sets of delegates. It was determined today, however, that the first plank of the peace agreement should be divided and in consequence of this arrangement the plank, as agreed on today, provides only that a provisional Government shall be established in Mexico City on a date to be filled in later.

The first plank, originally proposed, provided for naming the offices that the members of the provisional commission should hold, but it was decided today that this matter should form the subject for an additional plank. The parties to the conference reached a substantial agreement some time ago that provisional authority should consist of a provisional President and four heads of Cabinet departments, who should compose a commission in which action should be determined by a majority.

Today's protocol was the third in the history of the conference at Niagara Falls. The first set forth the fact that the peace negotiations had been inaugurated on May 20 and contained the rules of procedure adopted. The second contained the statement of the Mexican delegates that Gen. Huerta would agree to retire from office upon the establishment of a provisional authority, as provided for in a settlement reached thereafter.

After today's conference Justice Lamar, acting as spokesman for the mediators and delegates, made the statement:

We met and put in final and definite shape the subject we discussed and on which we made substantial agreement yesterday, which is now in writing. We agreed upon it in writing.

In

foreign Minister who would succeed him as Provisional President. The American delegates agreed that the point they made against Gen. Huerta having the privilege of naming his successor should be postponed for further consideration. One of the American delegates said at the time that if the conferees succeeded in agreeing on the persons to compose the new Provisional Government, he thought no insuperable obstacle would be presented with regard to the method of appointing the Provisional President.

The impression has been given in some quarters that the manner of appointment of the new Provisional President had become the acute issue in the conference, upon which the success of the negotiations would depend. This is an exaggerated view of the character of the discussion on the subject. The fact is that it was not until yesterday that objections to permitting Gen. Huerta to appoint the man chosen by the American and Mexican delegates to succeed him was presented in any formal way, and then only to be laid aside as something that would lose its importance if an agreement on the members of the commission government was reached.

Appointment Method Shelved.

What happend in this connection at yesterday's conference was that the American delegates indicated that if Huerta was permitted to sustain his dignity by going through the form of naming the man who would step into his shoes, the exercise of such a privilege would be construed as a recognition of the old warrior as constitutionally the Provisional President of Mexico. This, it was contended by the American delegates, would not be satisfactory to the United States, which had refused to grant recognition to the Huerta Government, and it would not be acceptable to the Constitutionalists, whose assent to the Niagara Falls peace agreement was essential to its success. The Mexican delegates contended that such an agreement carried no weight, and it was their refusal to abandon their opposition that caused the matter to be laid aside for the time being.

The impression, created in the minds of observers of the peace proceedings by the suggestion that Gen. Huerta should not be given the privilege of appointing as his successor the man selected here, is that it was brought forward mainly to obtain concessions of greater importance to the Wilson administration. Secretary Bryan's remark in Washington this week that the negotiation undertaking was being conducted amicably on the "give and take" principle tends to carry out this impression.

Prior to yesterday the American delegates had mentioned the matter to the mediators in a way to indicate that they did not think it of serious moment. They had never pressed the point until the full conference yesterday, at which the Mexican delegates were present.

It had been realized for several days that the main obstacle to a complete agreement was the insistence of the American delegates that a prominent Constitutionalist leader should be chosen to succeed Huerta as Provisional President. The mediators showed that they were not in sympathy with this suggestion, their view being that a virtual understanding existed that the new head of the temporary authority in Mexico should be a neutral, who had not been prominently identified with any of the Mexican factions.

The mediators succeeded, however, in presenting the American argument to the Mexican delegates in such a way that the latter conceded that the provisional President should be chosen from among Mexicans of high standing who had Constitutionalist proclivities. But they would not agree that any revolutionary chief, active in the present disturbances, should be named. This, they held, was asking too much in a peace parley where the idea of providing a non-partisan national government for Mexico was supposed to be one of the cardinal principles of the procedure. It was contended further that none of the foremost revolutionists was suitable. There is reason to believe that the Constitutionalist to be selected will not be a military leader like Carranza or Villa.

No less than two dozen names of persons suggested for appointment as provisional President have been discussed by the mediators and the American and Mexican delegates. None of these, however, were proposed by the American delegates, whose position appears to be that the suggestions should come from the Mexican delegates or the mediators. The Mexican delegates seem unwilling to nominate any Mexican prominent in the revolutionary movement, and little progress has been made toward an agreement on a provisional President. The matter of choosing Huerta's successor is still the critical problem of the negotiations as endangering the success of the peace efforts.

Antilla Incident Dropped.

Yielding to the advice of the mediators, the Mexican delegates have decided to ignore the Antilla affair. They will not withdraw from the conference or enter a protest on the ground that failure of the United States to prevent the Antilla from clearing from New York with arms for the Constitutionalist forces was a violation of the armistice arranged by the mediators.

CARRANZA IGNORES TERMS.

Names Three Delegates to Niagara and Does Nothing Else.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Gen. Venustiano Carranza, Supreme Chief of the Constitutionalist forces in Mexico, has appointed these three delegates to the Niagara mediation conference:

Fernando Iglesias Calderon, leader of the Liberal Party, now at Saltillo.

Luis Cabrera, confidential agent of Gen. Carranza in Washington.

José Vasconcelos, former confidential agent of Gen. Carranza in Canada, now attached to the Constitutionalist junta in Washington.

The appointment of these delegates was made in the answer of Gen. Carranza to the note of the A B C mediators, urging him to "hasten the appointment of his representatives," and to adhere to the terms of their invitation, prescribing an armistice and a willingness to have Mexican internal affairs discussed as the basis for admission to the peace conference.

Gen. Carranza's note was received by telegraph from Saltillo by Señor Rafael Zubaran after midnight this morning. Before daylight it had been mailed to the plenipotentiaries at Niagara Falls. Instead of sending instructions, on the basis of which Señor Zubaran would reply to the mediators' note of June 2, Gen. Carranza elected to make direct reply to the mediators himself, but telegraphed it first to Señor Zubaran.

The note is laconically brief. Gen. Carranza notifies the mediators that he has appointed delegates, and he designates them by name. There is nothing else in the Carranza note except the polite language in which he clothes his action. It can be stated positively and on authority that:

First.—The Carranza note makes no allusion to an armistice, and, in fact, ignores the intimation of the mediators in their note of June 2, that delegates would only be received if the stipulations as to an armistice were adhered to by the Constitutionalists.

Second.—There is nothing in the note, indicating any willingness to consent to the discussion by his delegates, if they are admitted at Niagara, of the internal affairs of the Mexican people.

Third.—The note contains nothing to indicate that his delegates are to attend on any other terms than those which he named in his earlier dispatches to the A B C envoys, namely, that he accepted the tender, in principle, of the proffered good offices of Argentina, Brazil and Chile, and regretted that efforts were being made at Niagara to solve the conflict between Mexico and the United States without taking into consideration that the "Constitutionalist cause has the support of the majority of the people of Mexico and has the largest armed forces within the Mexican republic."

The appointment by Gen. Carranza of his delegates and the ignoring of the important question of an armistice, despite the declaration by the mediators yesterday that Constitutionalist delegates would be admitted only on condition of declaring an armistice, leaves the situation so far as the Constitutionalists are concerned almost where it was when Gen. Carranza's message of May 28 was delivered at Niagara by Señor Juan F. Urquidi. The only gain is the actual naming of Carranza's representative.

Constitutionalist leaders here continued to insist today that Gen. Carranza could not consent to an armistice. They assert that he intends to carry forward his military campaign, regardless of whether his representatives are or are not admitted at Niagara.

Though Gen. Carranza has formally named delegates, it is not understood to be his intention to send them to Niagara until after the A B C envoys have had an opportunity to reply to his note. Should the mediators again insist on an armistice and stipulate conditions, he may not send the delegates, or he may again insist that the delegates he has named have a right to be admitted.

Before sending his delegates Gen. Carranza would like to have the envoys indicate the concrete points that are to be discussed. The purpose of this is to enable him to determine the character of the instructions he is to give to his delegates, who will not go to Niagara in any event until they have received instructions from Gen. Carranza.

It is possible that, to save time, Señor Calderon will be sent to Washington to join Señors Zubaran and Vasconcelos and receive later instructions here. Señor Calderon has been with Gen. Carranza now for more than a week and is fully conversant with the aims of the Carranza Government, and knows just how far Gen. Carranza is willing to have his delegates go in the discussion of Mexican matters at Niagara Falls.

"Very Encouraging," Says Wilson.

In Administration circles today a strong feeling of optimism prevailed as to the success of mediation. Members of the Cabinet radiated jubilation when they left the White House after a conference with the President.

Mr. Wilson broke his long silence on the subject by authorizing the declaration that the outlook for mediation was "very encouraging." Not a word on the subject had come from the Chief Executive for many weeks.

Secretary Bryan was enthusiastic over the outlook for peace. He and Secretary Daniels agreed that the Mexican situation was looking very hopeful from the viewpoint of the United States.

Later Secretary Bryan announced that an agreement had been reached at Niagara Falls over the first section of the proposed plan of Mexican settlement, covering the method of transition from Gen. Huerta's régime to the provisional government.

The Secretary of State declined to say precisely what method had been agreed upon, but intimated strongly that no sort of implied "recognition" of Gen. Huerta was troubling him. He said that recognition was a deliberate affirmative act and could not be implied. It was like getting married, he said, in which case two people gave consent.

In connection with the agreement said to have been reached between the American and Huerta representatives as to the method of transmission of power from Huerta to the Provisional Government, it was reported that a suggestion of the American Government might be accepted, namely, that Pedro Lascurain, who was Secretary of Foreign Affairs under Madero at the time of his assassination, resume his old office and become President after the elimination of Huerta. It was said that Lascurain might be accepted by the rebels to serve for a brief period as a means of maintaining constitutional precedent during the period of transition of authority from Huerta.

Mr. Bryan was very optimistic this afternoon about ultimate Constitutionalist representation at Niagara Falls. But reservers here do not see how the mediators, following their publication of the tart correspondence with the Constitutionalists, and their explanation that Constitutionalist representation was a closed incident, can now admit rebel representatives without any of the previous conditions being accepted. It is believed that this will be one of the most difficult problems of the next few days.

A possible outlet from the difficulty is that through the American delegates representatives of Gen. Carranza and Gen. Huerta might be brought together. This would mean practically that the services of the mediators would be dispensed with until their signatures were required for the final protocol.

CAPITAL STUDIES JUNTA PLAN.

Thinks the Envoys' Pacification Proposal Is Feasible.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, June 12.—The news of the prospective appointment of a provisional junta de gobierno as a result of the Niagara conferences, has been received here.

It is pointed out that such an institution as a junta de gobierno is not provided for by the Mexican Constitution, but it is recognized that the substance of the proposal can be attained without the violation of constitutional forms.

Gen. Huerta can appoint a new Minister of Foreign Relations and a certain number of Cabinet Ministers, according to a prearranged plan, leaving the other Cabinet posts vacant or in the hands of sub-Secretaries, as is the case at present in the departments of Foreign Affairs, Communications, and Agriculture. Then if Gen. Huerta were to retire the Minister of Foreign Affairs would become Provisional President, and could carry on the Government with the assistance of the Cabinet Ministers, previously appointed, it being tacitly understood that the vote of a majority would be decisive on all debatable questions.

Gen. Huerta declined today to make any statement regarding the reported organization of a junta de gobierno.

When questioned tonight in regard to the reported agreement on the junta plan, Señor Esteva Ruiz, Acting Secretary of Foreign Relations, said:

"I have no information that the mediators have reached such a decision, and I believe that there must be some mistake in the announcement. On the one hand, the Mexican Constitution does not permit the existence of juntas de gobierno, and makes an express provision as to the method by which the sovereign powers of the Government are to be conferred and transmitted. On the other hand it is not very probable that the representatives of the mediating powers, in view of the Constitutional provisions and the international functions which they are performing, would take any action of this nature. Moreover, this would have been communicated to me by the Mexican delegates."

Señor Esteva Ruiz added that he had not received any news today from the Mexican delegates to the Niagara conference, and from this he inferred that no agreement had been reached and that, on the other hand, no difficulty had arisen.

Referring to the representatives of the mediating powers, he said that they were persons of acknowledged competence in diplomacy and gentlemen of high culture.

1,271 AMERICANS REGISTER.

Lists in Mexico City Close with at Least 300 Names Not Inscribed.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, June 12.—The registration of Americans remaining in Mexico was closed at the Brazilian Legation this afternoon. The total number registered was 1,271. Of these 971 were persons resident in Mexico City and the rest were principally in Oaxaca, Puebla, and San Luis Potosi. About half the number registered were women and children.

The list will be taken by special messengers to Vera Cruz tomorrow and delivered to Consul Canada.

The Brazilian Legation estimates that 200 Americans in Mexico City are still unregistered. It is said that the reason why many Americans have not registered is that they apprehend that in the event of certain developments they might be required to leave the country. The number of Americans living outside of the capital and not registered is estimated by the Brazilian Legation at 100; but this is largely conjectural, and the number is probably greater.

REPULSED AT ZACATECAS.

Rebels Driven Back, Blanquet Says —Manzanillo Line Regained.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, June 12.—Minister Blanquet said tonight that the rebels had been repulsed in all their attempts to take the city of Zacatecas, capital of the State of he same name, and one of the most important mining centres in the republic. He also declared that the Federals had not lost a single one of their positions around that city.

The Ministers also told the newspaper men that Cuernavaca had not been attacked again, the Zapatistas having received too severe a lesson in their recent attempts.

Four thousand rebels have been dislodged from the town of Zacoalco, State of Jalisco, fifty miles from Guadalajara, on the Manzanillo Division of the National Railways. The rebels are said to have lost more than 300 killed and wounded. Gen. Manuel Zozaya commanded the Federals in person. It is thought now that the railway line can be repaired and regular communication between Guadalajara and the Port of Manzanillo reestablished. The rebels dislodged from Zacoalo fled in the direction of the State of Colima.

The Japanese Minister has reached Irapuato, the junction of the Guadalajara Division with the main line of the Mexican Central. He will reach Mexico City tomorrow afternoon.

TORREON, June 12.—Advices received today at the Headquarters of the North said that Gen. Natera was continuing his attack on Zacatecas and had been fighting for three days.

The brevity of the dispatch was thought here to indicate that the advance has not been rapid although details have been lacking.

Actual assault on the position it was believed here will not be made until Villa's forces arrive.

SHOOT OROZCO'S MEN.

Rebels Shoot Fifteen Captured in the North.

Special to The New York Times.

EL PASO, June 12.—Executions of captive Federals have been resumed in the north of Mexico, and fifteen have been put to death in the last week.

At a small station on the Mexican Northwestern Railroad the rebels captured fifteen of Orozco's former followers and promptly stood them up against a wall and shot them.

In Juarez on Wednesday night a spy who was tried by court-martial and ordered executed was shot by a firing squad in the cemetery. Another alleged spy was stopped by the rebels, but made a run for it, and fought his way to the river bank and escaped to the American side.

VERA CRUZ EXPECTS PEACE.

Mississippi and Destroyers Sail— Recall of Other Ships Predicted.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
From a Staff Correspondent.

VERA CRUZ, June 12.—Vera Cruz quietly awaits the news of Huerta's resignation and the institution of a Provisional Government. That the war clouds are fast passing is the opinion of the majority of army and navy officers and citizens generally.

The local papers spread all over their first pages the news of Huerta's impending resignation, and most of them hazard the guess that Luis Cabrera will be the head of the Provisional Government.

The dreadnought Utah will sail for New York on Monday, and will be followed in the course of the week by the Michigan, which will go to Philadelphia. The Mississippi, with the naval aviation corps aboard, sailed for Pensacola this afternoon. The torpedo-boat destroyer flotilla also sailed today for Hampton Roads. The New Hampshire was ordered home tonight.

It is believed that several other battleships will be going soon, among the first being the Florida, Connecticut, Minnesota, and North Dakota. The departure of these ships will be taken as a sure indication of the passing of the Mexican crisis and the dawn of a settlement of the republic's troubles.

ANTILLA'S CARGO LANDED.

1,600 Cases of Ammunition Immediately Sent to Northern Mexico.

TAMPICO, June 11 (Via Laredo, Tex., June 12).—The steamship Antilla, from New York, today discharged her cargo of ammunition for the Constitutionalists.

Sixteen hundred cases of ammunition and two aeroplanes were immediately dispatched north on a special train.

Until after her arrival at the wharf here the officers of the Antilla knew nothing of the projected blockade of the port or the presence of the Federal gunboats Zaragosa and Bravo, outside the harbor.

The Antilla will sail tomorrow for Tampiquca to recover the body of Weston Burwell, the American reported murdered by Federals on April 22.

VILLA NURSING A GRUDGE.

Clash Near with Carranza, Who Is Playing for Delay.

EL PASO, Texas, June 12.—Delay is the basis of Carranza's policy, according to information received here tonight.

The only menace to his supposed plan is an estrangement between him and Gen. Villa, which is nearing a crisis, according to rumors that reach here and are confirmed in part by officials.

Villa, to whose credit is given nearly all the recent successes of the revolution, has remained at Torreon, viewing the efforts of Gen. Naters, a recent appointee of Carranza, to take Zacatecas. Reports from the south today said that Villa had shown great resentment at Carranza's recent attitude toward him, especially in the Natera appointment.

Gen. Carranza issued an order to Gen. Villa tonight that he proceed at once to the assistance of Gen. Natera in his attack on Zacatecas. This is taken as having direct bearing on the relations of Villa, commanding the northern zone, and Natera, as head of the new central zone, and their mutual relations to Carranza as commander of all the Constitutionalist forces.

Meanwhile Carranza goes on with his plans. Two of these delegates of the revolutionists, Luis Cabrera and José Vasconcelos, are in the United States within a short distance of Niagara Falls. Fernando Calderon, the third man, is still with the Constitutionalist commander at Saltillo, and could not reach Niagara in much less than a week.

The Constitutionalists continue to make military progress, which is thought to enforce their position in demanding special consideration in relation to any pacification plan.

Mazatlan, on the west coast, as well as Zacatecas are being attacked, while the investment of San Luis Potosi, it was said, is becoming menacing to the Federal defenders.

ARMS EMBARGO CLEARED UP.

Commerce Department Has Authority by Sea, Treasury by Land.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—President Wilson today issued an executive order to clear away any conflict of authority over shipments of arms to Mexico. It was as follows:

As matters which relate to the clearance of vessels fall within the jurisdiction of the Department of Commerce, it is hereby ordered that instructions to customs officers concerning the exportation of arms and munitions of war to Mexico by sea shall be given that department. Similar instructions concerning such exportations by land shall be issued by the Treasury Department.

No explanation of the order was made, but it was recalled that the recent clearance of the liner Antilla from New York to Tampico with arms for the Constitutionalists was described as "a misconception of orders," and it developed that there was conflict of authority between the two departments. In many quarters the executive order issued today was regarded as new evidence of the intention of the Administration to enforce the embargo.

FEAR FAMINE AT VERA CRUZ.

Government Has a Plan to Sell to Wholesale Merchants.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Fear of a real famine at Vera Cruz because of failure to receive food supplies, owing to the break in the railway and the refusal of the Huerta Government to permit the rails to be replaced, is giving the War Department no little concern. Acting Secretary Breckenridge has concluded that the task of provisioning the city is beyond the ability of individuals and has plans for the shipment of food on Government transports. Today he cabled Gen. Funston to look into the conditions of the food supply and, if possible, to recommend some means of food distribution that would relieve the needs of the civilian population without destroying the business of the regular native merchants.

The American soldiers and marines are being properly fed through the Quartermaster's Department, but the civilian population, normally about 40,000 number and now greatly swollen by refugees from all parts of Central Mexico, is entirely dependent on the retail merchants. The latter are charging enormous prices for food—as much as 50 cents, gold, a pound for potatoes—because there are no wholesale supplies upon which to draw. Their sole reliance is the very small belt of country within gunshot of the American lines outside the town.

One plan being considered looks to the sale by the United States Government of food supplies, not to the public directly, but to the established native wholesale and retail distributing agencies, at cost prices, upon agreement that the supplies shall be sold to the public at a fair profit. In this way the United States Government would avoid destroying the business of the native merchants and would be relieved of duty of providing a complex system of food distribution.

War Department officials today refused to discuss Gen. Funston's suggestion that the American lines be extended inland from Vera Cruz, but it is known that the subject is receiving careful consideration.

NAVARRETE FORTIFYING.

Huerta General Has 2,000 Troops Twenty Miles from Vera Cruz.

VERA CRUZ, June 12.—Gen. Rubio Navarrete, in command of a force of Mexican troops between Vera Cruz and Mexico City, is reported to be fortifying the town of San Francisco, some twenty miles from Vera Cruz, on the Interoceanic Railway. The rumor, which first came from the capital, was substantiated by reports to the American Army headquarters here. Gen. Navarrete, it is understood, has about 2,000 men at San Francisco.

The morning train out to the gap in the railroad, where passegers to and from Mexico City are transferred, carried out from Vera Cruz today more Mexicans than ever before. This exodus was almost balanced, however, by the number of refugees arriving from the capital. Among those from the Federal district are many priests who say they have been warned by the Constitutionalists of dire punishment if found at their posts.

MAZATLAN LOSES HEAVILY.

Rains Add to Suffering of Garrison and Starving People.

ON BOARD U. S. A. CALIFORNIA, MAZATLAN, June 11 (via wireless to San Diego, June 12).—The Constitutionalist army under Gen. Obregon began today its first concentrated general assault on the Federal fortifications at Mazatlan, commanded by Gen. Rodriguez. The battle raged all day, and although the besieged garrison held its positions, it lost heavily in killed and wounded.

The first heavy rains of the wet season began here today and will add to the hardships of the combatants. The Federals, who are short of supplies and must in addition keep under control a starving and hostile populace within their lines, will suffer most from this new burden. The besiegers have plenty of provisions and by reason of their superior numbers can keep the garrison harrassed night and day, between assaults, while a part of their number rest.

The constitutionalists' gunboat Tampico, it was learned today, has been floated at Topolobambo and it she can be brought south to Mazatlan will greatly aid the attacking force.

IMPEACH JUDGE A. G. DAYTON

Mine Troubles Lead to Charges in House Against Federal Jurist.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Impeachment charges were presented in the House today against Alston G. Dayton, United States District Judge for the Northern District of West Virginia, and without objection were referred to the Judiciary Committee for investigation.

Representative Neely of West Virginia presented the charges, accusing the jurist of "high crimes and misdemeanors."

"I charge him," the Representative said, "with various acts of personal and judicial misconduct for which he should be impeached."

The case grows out of the labor troubles in West Virginia. One of the allegations is that Judge Dayton used his office to the advantage of the coal operators, by "improperly issuing injunctions to prevent the miners from exercising their rights under the Federal and State laws," and Mr. Neely further charged that Judge Dayton openly had asserted that he would not permit United Mine Workers to exist within his court's jurisdiction.

The resolution gives the Judiciary Committee all necessary authority for investigation and hearings. The committee, it is expected, will create a subcommittee of three members to go to West Virginia to take evidence.

ABANDON PEACE HOPE IN COLORADO MINES

Operators Tell Congress That Miners' Union Inaugurated Insurrection, Not a Strike.

SCORE 'MAUDLIN SYMPATHY'

Strikers Will Reply to Employers' Brief—They Assail Feudalism of Western State.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Representative Martin D. Foster of Illinois, Chairman of the House Committee on Mines and Mining, today received a brief from the mining operators of Colorado giving their side of the controversy in the coal fields of that State. In the brief the assertion is made that the time possibly was passed in which a settlement can be made, and that there is little left for the striking miners to do but to hunt employment elsewhere.

"There are about 10,000 miners now at work in the coal fields of Colorado," says the brief. "There are probably from 1,500 to 2,000 on strike. Those on strike, together with their confederates, have so often attacked and fired upon the miners now working in the coal fields that it is impossible to put those two warring elements to work in the same mines. Those now in the mines fear that the striking miners, should they be inducted into the mines with them, would watch their opportunity to assassinate them or catch them in some serious mine disaster."

The brief of the operators is a reply to a brief which was filed with Chairman Foster, a week ago in behalf of the striking miners. The two taken together constitute a document which is a remarkable reflection of the bitterness and strife in the coal fields.

The brief filed today was signed by Fred Herrington, Frank E. Gove, J. V. Sickman, George E. Manley, Charles Hayden, and Jesse G. Northcutt, as counsel for the operators. It covers 163 typewritten pages. Only one recommendation is made. It follows:

"The only recommendation that we have to suggest is that the officers of the law be encouraged to faithfully and rigorously execute the law now on the statute books the same as those molded into our common law, as this, in our judgment, will be found more effective than the cultivation of a maudlin sympathy for those who stand in rebellion against the constituted authority of a sovereign State."

The blame for the entire trouble is laid at the door of the United Mine Workers of America by the operators. The brief sets forth that "a controversy has grown out of what is popularly referred to as a strike, but which, in fact, embraces few, if any, of the elements of a strike. It then says:

"Instead of a strike this controversy is an armed insurrection against the sovereign authority of the State of Colorado, conceived, planned, financed, managed, and directed by the officers and leaders of the United Mine Workers of America, inaugurated more than a year ago and pursued with a persistency and villainy most insidious and reprehensible."

Then follows a recital of the history of strikes in coal mines throughout the country, with the part played in each by the United Mine Workers organization.

"This," says the brief, "is the organization solemnly, after mature deliberation, adjudged an outlaw and a trouble breeder, which more than a year ago fastened its greedy eyes upon the two thousand and more coal miners of this State as a source of contribution, through the check-off system to its hungry treasury, and, as a blind to their real purpose, claimed the right without invitation or solicitation to intrude to our peaceful and happy community and tell the whole people, from the most humble to the most exalted, how we should conduct our affairs.

"And they, the all-wise, assume to establish a new order of things, shaped according to their own conceived pattern."

In chronological order there is presented a full page of some of the acts of the Mine Workers Organization, which the operators alleged occurred in Louisiana and Las Animas Counties from Sept. 23, 1913, to April 29, 1914.

At another place the brief, after discussing the efforts on the part of the operators to obtain a settlement, says:

"If the strikers are as earnest in their wish to settle the strike, as they are active in the circulation of stories of sensational episodes, the difficulty could not continue for even a brief period longer.

"But it is a question if the day of possible settlement has not now forever passed."

Chairman Foster said today that the striking miners would have an opportunity to make a reply to the charges of the operators, and this argument of the miners would be in addition to the brief which is already before the committee.

It is the claim of the miners that the chief and fundamental cause of the industrial war is the ignorance of the mine owners concerning the actual conditions under which their employes live and work. Coupled with this, they set forth in their brief, is a "lack of any proper sense of personal responsibility on the part of those mine owners for what is wrong in those conditions."

Other underlying causes are given as follows:

"The maintenance by the coal mining operators of a modern system of monopolistic feudalism with many of the evil features of the old feudalism, but without many of those features which made it somewhat beneficent; the insistence by the operators upon their right to conduct a vast coal producing business—a business in reality affected with a public interest—regardless of how their conduct may affect society at large, and as if it were a small private business, and the unwillingness on the part of the operators to concede to their employes the right of effective organization while themselves maintaining a complete combination of organization."

Further, the brief filed for the miners, says:

"The Colorado Fuel and Iron Company produces 40 per cent. of the coal produced in Colorado, and John D. Rockefeller owns 40 per cent. of this company. As there is no evidence that any one person controls any greater interest in the coal mines of the State, the testimony of Mr. Rockefeller's son and representative is important.

"John D. Rockefeller, Jr., a Director of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company, and the representative of his father, who owns such a large interest in it, has not found it necessary to attend a Directors' meeting for ten years, because he is kept 'fully informed' by President Welborn and Vice President Bowers, who is also Treasurer of the company and Chairman of its Executive Board. Mr. Rockefeller does not even know all his fellow Directors, nor does he know who, next to his father, is the largest stockholder, because the books and stock accounts are kept in the West.

"Colorado presents an instance of modern feudalism. Until there is both political and industrial democracy and the old order is done away with there can be no permanent content. The ancient feudalism was based, it is true, upon agriculture; the modern feudalism, as illustrated in this instance, is based upon mining, but this is an immaterial difference. Private monopolistic ownership or control of the land, from the products of which existence was maintained by the labor of the many for the few, was one of the great characteristics of the old feudalism, as it is of the modern."

END WEST VIRGINIA STRIKE.

Miners Waive Union Recognition— Gain Other Demands.

COLLIERS, W. Va., June 12.—The strike of 400 miners of the West Virginia and Pittsburgh Coal Company was called off today following the announcement of leaders of the miners that they would waive the demand for recognition of the union. It was unofficially announced that the company had granted the eight-hour day, the wage scale of the United Mine Workers of America, and extended to the miners the protection of the Insurance Department of the West Virginia Public Service Commission.

The strike, which began last September, was attended by much disorder.

JEROME OPPOSES THAW'S BAIL PLEA

Files a Brief in Supreme Court Against Petition Made in New Hampshire.

NO TRIP TO PITTSBURGH

Carmody Insists No Arrangement Will Be Made Which Recognizes Thaw's Right to be at Large.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The arrangement supposed to have been made between the attorneys for Harry K. Thaw and William T. Jerome and Attorney General Carmody by which Thaw was to be allowed to go to Pittsburgh in custody was not borne out by what occurred here today in the Supreme Court of the United States. Without any explanations, Mr. Jerome, as Special Deputy Attorney General, filed a brief for Attorney General Carmody and himself against granting the petition of Harry K. Thaw for bail under the habeas corpus proceedings begun in the United States District Court of New Hampshire.

Attorney General Carmody contends that the proceedings in the Pennsylvania courts, for which bail is asked so that Thaw may go to Pittsburgh, are not of such a character that his deposition taken in New Hampshire would not answer all purposes.

The Attorney General announced his intention at the earliest time permitted to move to advance the proceeding now before the Supreme Court in order that it might be speedily determined.

Mr. Jerome urged that Thaw was now insane and dangerous to himself and to others and that the Supreme Court, or any other, should not take the responsibility of releasing him on bail. He points out that the proceedings authorized by District Judge Edgar Aldrich in New Hampshire, whereby a commission was appointed to examine into Thaw's insanity and found that it was reasonably probable that Thaw's liberty under bail would not be dangerous or a menace to public peace and safety, were entirely ex parte and the State of New York was not permitted to appear, although a brief was presented which contained a full history of Thaw's manifestations of insanity.

Mr. Jerome declined to make any statement in regard to the case, saying that Attorney General Carmody would give out a statement if one were necessary. The attorneys for Thaw, ex-Gov. William A. Stone and W. A. Shurtleff, said they would file affidavits to rebut the statements made in the brief filed by Mr. Jerome, but would make no other statement about the matter.

Mr. Jerome returned to New York immediately after leaving the office of the clerk of the court. It is expected that the Supreme Court will reach a decision in time for announcement on Monday.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, June 12.—The Attorney General gave out this statement today:

The story that appears today in some of the New York newspapers that an agreement had been reached between the Attorney General's Department and the attorneys for Harry K. Thaw to the effect that he will be permitted to go to the State of Pennsylvania is without the slightest foundation. This department regards Thaw as insane, a menace to society, and a fugitive from justice. He is at liberty because the mandate has triumphed over the law, and no arrangement of any kind will be entered into that will recognize his right to be at large.

THOMAS CARMODY, Attorney General.

BERLIN, N. H., June 12.—Harry K. Thaw had heard nothing officially today regarding the opposition of the New York Attorney General regarding his going to Pittsburgh. He said that he was "willing to accept the agreement for the Summer and let the other side down easy," although his counsel, ex-Gov. Stone, was inclined to think his release on bail should have been insisted on without further delay.

Thaw criticised the New York Attorney General's office for what he called "the extraordinary advertising indulged in on the eve of the presentment of the matter to the Supreme Court."

COLLEGE GIRL A SUICIDE.

Daughter of Butler College's Head Takes Poison.

Special to The New York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, July 12.—Miss Mary Elizabeth Howe, daughter of Thomas Carr Howe, President of Butler College, and astudent in the institution, committed suicide at her home tonight by swallowing cyanide of potassium, which she is said to have taken from the college laboratory.

No cause has been assigned for the act, but a note addressed to her parents is in the hands of the Coroner.

Miss Howe was prominent in social affairs at Butler, and only last night attended a dance, following a play given by the senior class. She was apparently in excellent spirits throughout the evening.

This afternoon she returned home later than usual, after working in the laboratory on chemistry problems. When she arrived home, she told her mother that she was tired, and wished to rest before going to the dance, so after a light dinner she went to her room. When a youth came to escort her to the dance and Mrs. Howe went to call her daugheter, she found her lying dead on her bed.

NO BRYAN "SILVER TRICK."

McAdoo Ridicules the Explanation of Government's Silver Payments.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—When Secretary McAdoo's attention was called today to a report coming from New York that the Government was paying its obligations in silver, and that this was due to the influence of Secretary Bryan, who was "up to his old silver tricks," he said:

"The man who had that thought is a curiosity. The thing is profoundly foolish. The policy now is precisely what it has always been. We are paying obligations in all sorts of money. For instance, it happened today that we paid out $1,400,000 more in gold than we did on this date last year. What does that mean? Can't some one think of some old trick that somebody is up to in that circumstance?"

SEEK TRACTION BOND ISSUE.

Broadway and Seventh Avenue Line Would Put Out $500,000 Worth.

The Broadway and Seventh Avenue Railroad Company is seeking permission from the Public Service Commission to issue $500,000 worth of bonds to retire bonds issued under its second mortgage, which will fall due on July 1. The company now has outstanding $2,100,000 common stock, $1,500,000 first mortgage 5 per cent. bonds, $500,000 second mortgage 5 per cent. bonds, and $7,650,000 first consolidated mortgage 5 per cent. bonds, out of a total authorized issue of $12,500,000.

Commissioner Maltbie will hold a public hearing on the application of the company on June 16. In asking for a hearing on the matter, the company says that the application "is made without prejudice to the right of your petitioner to claim or assert that it has the legal right to issue said bonds without the approval of your honorable commission."

POLICEMAN KILLS MAN.

Aaron Hirsch, Fleeing Criminal, Shot Down, and Frank Gottwald Hit by Accident.

Two deflected bullets from a policeman's revolver yesterday morning killed a man and injured a youth at Fifty-seventh Street and Second Avenue. The man, who was a notorious criminal attempting to escape from the policeman, was struck by a bullet that rebounded from the pavement of Second Avenue, and the youth, a bystander, was struck in the right leg by a bullet that glanced off the base of an elevated railway pillar. The youth, Frank Gottwald, 19 years old, of 1,688 Avenue A, was taken to Flower Hospital, where it was said that he soon would recover.

The dead man was Aaron Hirsch, 40 years old, who was thought by the police to have lived in Clinton Street, Brooklyn. After four previous prison terms, he was released from Blackwell's Island last March at the end of a year term for burglary. He was known to the police as a habitual criminal of a particularly tough kind. One of his practices, according to several who knew him, was to browbeat and frighten women until they lent him money, which he never returned. Two women who came to know him before they were aware of his character and who suffered for their acquaintanceship with him were Mrs. Hattie Gross of 237 East 124th Street and Mrs. Bertha Zorn of 411 East Fifty-sixth Street.

Within the last few days both of these women had trouble several times with Hirsch in Mrs. Zorn's apartment. Last Wednesday Hirsch threatened to "get even" with Mrs. Gross because she had helped Mrs. Zorn in an effort to have him arrested. On Thursday afternoon, while Mrs. Gross was visiting Mrs. Zorn, Hirsch entered her apartment in 124th Street and robbed it. He took $25 and every article of clothing that Mrs. Gross possessed, except the clothes she wore.

Mrs. Gross went to the East 126th Street Police Station and obtained a warrant for Hirsch's arrest. Yesterday morning Mrs. Zorn received a post card with Mrs. Gross's name signed to it. The card instructed her to meet Mrs. Gross at Fifty-seventh Street and Second Avenue at 11 o'clock in the morning. The women decided the card had been sent by Hirsch. Patrolman Joseph Wallace of the East Fifty-first Street Station accompanied Mrs. Zorn to Fifty-seventh Street and Second Avenue, where she met Hirsch. Wallace stepped up and told him that he was under arrest.

Hirsch started running across Second Avenue, and placed his hand on his hip pocket as though he was about to draw a revolver. Wallace fired twice at the ground, and these bullets hit Hirsch and Gottwald. Hirsch fell, but rose again and staggered to the sidewalk, where he died. As he fell the second time he took a paper from his pocket and tore it up. It was found to be a list of collections he had made for a fictitious invalid.

After the details of the shooting were learned at the District Attorney's office Patrolman Wallace was allowed to return to duty.

The shooting attracted a large crowd. Some one telephoned the East Fifty-first Street Station that a policeman had been shot, and Capt. Thor hurried to the corner at the head of the station reserves. It took the reserves several minutes to disperse the crowd.

DELAY IN I. W. W. TRIALS.

Justice Morschauser Considers Application for Writ of Prohibition.

People of Tarrytown received for the third time yesterday the I. W. W. party which originally visited the village to denounce John D. Rockefeller, Jr., in the public square. The villagers expected Judge Moorhouse would give the I. W. W. prisoners a quick trial and send them to the King's County Penitentiary, but Supreme Court Justice Morschauser, sitting at White Plains, took under consideration an application for a writ of prohibition, and said he would not hand down a decision until July 1. Judge Moorhouse postponed the trials until that date.

After adjourning court, Judge Moorhouse joined the villagers in giving the I. W. W. people a pleasant hour about the village streets. An elderly woman led Becky Edelson away to a soda fountain. Judge Moorhouse himself accepted an invitation to have a soda with Alexander Berkman, and so the soda fountains on the streets near the Court House became centres for I. W. W. receptions that lasted throughout the morning.

A group of young men were unreconciled, they said, to the action of the Tarrytown Trustees in agreeing to hire a hall in which to let representatives of the Free Speech League explain their demands. The young men wore small American flags in their coats and offered to make wagers that the Trustees would not be able to find a single hall in Tarrytown for rent for a Free Speech mass meeting.

Investigation by a TIMES reporter indicated that the Trustees would be unable to find a hall for rent. At the Opera House, said to be owned by James Butler, the New York grocer, James B. Hoar, the manager, said he would not lease the building for such a meeting. The Music Hall, its manager said, was engaged for every night through the Summer. Use of the public school buildings was restricted by ordinance to "meetings of an educational character," and the Tarrytown Lyceum was not to be had.

Frank R. Pierson, Village President, said that "in some quarters the Trustees have not been treated with much courtesy."

QUEEN MARY SEES TANGO AND LIKES IT

Converted by American Professionals to Modern Dances as Done in New York.

THANKS THE PERFORMERS

With King and Brilliant Company Applauds One Step and "Buck" Dance at Grand Duke Michael's.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 12.—Queen Mary's deep-rooted prejudice against the tango, one-step, and other exotic modern dances all went by the board on Thursday night, when she and King George honored the Grand Duke Michael and Countess Torby with their company at dinner at Ken Wood, Hampstead, and at the ball which followed for the Grand Duke's daughters, Countess Nada and Countess Zia Torby.

It was the American dancers, Maurice and Florence Walton, who worked the miracle of the Queen's conversion to ragtime and tango as done in New York, and for one solid hour after dinner Queen Mary, flanked by King George, the Grand Duchess Anastasia, and a brilliant assembly, watched the modern ballroom gymnastics of Maurice and his partner with every manifestation of interest and approval, punctuating their sixteen dances with frequent exclamations of admiration.

Queen Mary smiled at the complicated steps of Maurice's eccentric "buck" dance, and at the end of the programme asked to have the pair recalled to give an encore of the one-step. Then she had the dancers presented to her, and thanked them graciously, saying: "Your dances were charming."

Maurice today gave an interesting account of how he showed Queen Mary "how 'twas done in polite American society." He said:

"I had no intention when I went to Ken Wood of doing the tango, maxixe, or one-step. Several of my friends had tipped me off that their Majesties wouldn't stand for it. I was only going to show them my skating waltz and the hesitation, but along came the Grand Duke Michael, their host, and said to me, 'Mon cher M. Maurice, do me the pleasure to show your latest creations to their Majesties,' adding, with a laugh, the French equivalent, freely translated, of 'Go as far as you like.'

"I knew what he meant by that, but the Queen herself left no doubt as to her wish in the matter, for she told the Grand Duchess Anastasia that she'd like to see the real Argentine tango, as she'd never seen it. I was the happiest man in the world when the Grand Duchess brought the Queen's request to do the tango, saying she'd be much obliged.

"We started with a plain waltz, then did the maxixe. The Queen commented: 'I don't see why people find anything wrong in these dances.' When we did the skating waltz the Queen remarked: 'It seems as if they were on the ice.' A little later on she remarked: 'How can they remember all those steps?' The Queen smiled her pleasure and the King shook with laughter at the American buck dance, and especially at the business of beating time with the fingers on collar and cuffs. The Queen applauded all the dances, but what she liked especially were the hesitation waltz and the old minuet to modern steps.

"Seeing we'd got away so well with all the others, I thought we'd show 'em the American one-step, and close the programme with it, but as we were going out Queen Mary asked the Countess Nada to request us to be kind enough to come back and do another one-step, and we did. She found nothing objectionable in any of the modern dances as we did them. She's so nice, too—absolutely different from what they all say," observed Maurice, with the confidence of one who knew whereof he was talking.

"As a final encore," he continued, "we gave the double one-step. It literally made Queen Mary sit up and take notice. We were both presented afterward to their Majesties by the Grand Duke Michael. They thanked us, the Queen adding: 'Your dances were so charming.' Also, they expressed wonder that we could have danced at all on such a floor, which was frightfully slippery."

Maurice added the interesting information that, in deference to Queen Mary, his partner, Florence Walton, did not wear the regulation slit skirt, but a specially made gown with a blue de rol satin skirt reaching to the ankles, and further burdened with a long white satin train, which Miss Walton held in her hand while dancing, and found it pretty hard going thus handicapped.

The Duchess of Marlborough was one of the guests who sat down to dinner with their Majesties before the dancing exhibition, and among the Americans who came in afterward for the ball were the Duchess of Roxburghe, who gave a dinner party at Chesterfield House and brought on a large number of guests to the ball; the Duchess of Manchester, the Countess of Craven, the Viscountess Maidstone, the Countess of Granard, Lady Cunard, Lady Irene Curzon, and Lady Decies.

WAR OF MOVIES IN LONDON.

N. Y. Motion Picture Corporation Loses Suit Against Transatlantic Co.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 12.—The New York Motion Picture Corporation and the Western Imports Company of New York and London defended unsuccessfully an appeal by the Transatlantic Film Company in the Appeals Court here today.

An interim injunction was granted recently restraining the Transatlantic Company from reserving their films as productions of the Keystone Company of America of New York, the plaintiffs claiming that they were the sole proprietors of the Keystone productions. It was against this interim injunction that the Transatlantic Film Company appealed.

According to their affidavits, the New York Motion Picture Corporation had only an interest in one moiety of the Keystone productions, the other moiety being held by the Mutual Film Corporation of New York.

The court held that the New York Motion Picture Corporation had not shown anything to entitle it to the interim injunction, and allowed the appeal. The interim injunction accordingly was dismissed.

NEW FILMS CHEAPLY MADE.

Pole Makes Them for 16 Cents Equal to Films Costing $55.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 12.—Kasimir do Proszynski, who has been called the "Polish Edison," gave the first demonstration of his new cinematograph camera today at the June meeting of the Royal Photographic Society.

The films used are not in a narrow strip, but are on a broad sheet, and the pictures are impressed upon it sixteen to a line, backward and forward, much as on a sheet of typewritten matter.

M. Proszynski said that about a foot of this film was equal to 100 feet of ordinary film, and that whereas the cost of 100 feet of ordinary film, lasting for little more than one minute on projection, might be about $55, the cost of a sheet of broad film bearing the same number of pictures would be only 16 cents.

CANAL LOCKS IN FINE TRIM.

Ready for the Passage of Vessels of Any Size—$7,356 in Tolls Taken.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PANAMA, June 12.—Recent tests show that the canal locks are in perfect condition for the passage of vessels of any size. The towing locomotives and intricate lock machinery have met every requirement, and Gov. Goethals is well satisfied.

Cargoes of more than 6,000 tons have been taken through the canal in barges since May 18, and the total earnings to June 10 were $7,356.

Under the present arrangement the Panama Railroad bears the toll charges and collects them from the shippers.

FINED FOR SELLING DRUGS.

Two Paris Chemists Sold a "Fiend" 200 Tubes of Morphine a Week.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, June 12.—Astonishing facts were revealed in a Paris court case in which two chemists were charged with selling drugs to morphine-users. A young woman obtained from one of the chemists fifty tubes of morphine weekly and, finding that amount insufficient, obtained from the other 150 tubes in one week.

Her deposition started with the words, "I swear to tell the truth; but I feel some bitterness against M. Juvin (one of the chemists) as, if I am not dead, it is not his fault."

One of the chemists who is charged with selling drugs to another woman produced as his authority for doing so a curious prescription from the woman's doctor, which ended: "I advised her to continue with these, as she finds some improvement, or else to turn to absinthe or commit suicide, which is the best way of escaping the misery of existence."

Despite the production of this document, the two chemists were fined $100 each.

LEON DAUDET WOUNDED.

French Duellist Worsted in Sword Encounter with Jacques Roujon.

PARIS, June 12.—Léon Daudet, a notorious duellist, was wounded in the forearm in the course of a sword duel today at Neuilly by Jacques Roujon, son of Henri Roujon, the late Secretary of the Academy of Fine Arts.

Roujon was the challenger, and he fought in defense of the name of his father, whose memory he considered to have been injured by articles which appeared in Daudet's paper, the Action Française, a Royalist organ.

The encounter took place in private, only the principals and the seconds being present.

RIBOT CABINET OUT; PARIS IN UPROAR

France's 48th Premier in 43 Years Lasts One Day—A Presidential Crisis Also.

ARMY SERVICE LAW FIGHT

Poincare's Downfall Demanded by Victorious Extremists—Financial Crisis Feared.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, June 12.—The new Cabinet formed by M. Alexandre Félix Ribot after MM. Viviani, Doumergue, Peytral, Dupuy, and Deschanel in succession had failed in the task which President Poincaré had set them, came to grief today in its first encounter with the Chamber of Deputies, which refused a vote of confidence after rejecting its declaration of policy. France thus is plunged into the gravest political chaos, and tonight the Paris boulevards are the scene of excited demonstrations. Prime Minister Ribot and his colleagues resigned immediately after the vote against them.

"To Versailles!" shouted the triumphant Radicals and Socialists who overturned the new Ribot Ministry; for behind the Ministerial crisis looms the shadow of a Presidential crisis, and it is at Versailles that the Senate and Chamber always meet to elect the President of the republic.

M. Poincaré stands for three years' military service. The Radicals and the Socialists, headed by M. Caillaux and M. Jaurès, are pledged to overthrow that law, whose repeal the Premier of a day declared in the Chamber this afternoon would, in the present military situation in Europe, imperil the security of France.

M. Ribot was expected to obtain a small majority, and business on the Bourse improved on this hope and the announcement that the new Cabinet would issue immediately a loan of $190,000,000 to meet the expenses of the three years' service bill. A strong reaction is expected on the Bourse tomorrow.

The political crisis is complicated to an unusual degree by the financial situation. The Treasury is practically denuded of funds, and current expenses are met only by the hand-to-mouth expedient of votes on account. Reports are current of salaries of officials being in arrears to an extent described by one of the papers as more resembling conditions in imperial Turkey than in republican France.

By The Associated Press.

PARIS, June 12.—When the sitting of the Chamber came to an end two motions were before it—one approving the application of the three years' military service law for the present, which was part of the Premier's declaration of policy, and the other disapproving of the new Cabinet on the ground that it was not representative of public opinion as indicated by the recent general election, in which the Socialists and others opposed to the military service law gained notable victories.

The division on the military service law showed a vote of 306 to 262 against it, and later a motion disapproving the Cabinet, proposed by Deputies Albert Dalimier and Louis Jean Forsugh, was adopted by a vote of 374 to 187.

The debate was one of the stormiest in the history of the Chamber of Deputies. Every sentence of the veteran statesman in declaring the new Government's policy was punctuated by angry or derisive taunts of his adversaries.

The overthrow of the Ministry, which was more overwhelming than the most sanguine Radical had expected, was due principally to the defection of thirty non-radical Republicans, who, fearing what they considered the tendencies of reaction in the Cabinet, either abstained from voting, or voted against it.

President Poincaré has not yet taken any action on the crisis. It is believed, however, that he again will call upon M. Viviani to form a Ministry. M. Viviani is understood to have a combination of Ministers ready and will accept the President's renewed confidence in him and make his appearance with a new Government in the Chamber Tuesday. On the other hand the Radicals are trying to force President Poincaré to call upon former Premier Combes to head the Cabinet.

TROOPS CONTROL ITALIAN RIOTERS

Train Service Restored, Except Around Ancona, Ravenna, and Forli.

SOME FIGHTING IN NAPLES

Hoodlums Stone Soldiers, Who Repulse Them—Revolutionary Acts in Ravenna.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, June 12.—The strike situation continues grave in certain districts, but inquiries coming from abroad astound Italians, as they show that conditions have been depicted outside as if the whole country were in a state of revolution.

The violence which occurred in Naples, Ravenna, Forli, and Parma after the cessation of the strike is attributed to Anarchist malefactors who seized the opportunity to carry out their criminal plans.

Tonight the police and military authorities are masters of the situation everywhere.

Several Americans who are passing through Italy are interested in the study of the strike problem and astonished to see the discipline of the masses of workmen, who struck when the signal was given but returned to work immediately when ordered to do so. One of them said that in other countries when popular passions had been unchained it was more difficult to restrain them.

ROME, June 12.—Almost all of Italy is quiet tonight after the rioting which has been in progress since the recent declaration of a general strike. Demonstrations have virtually ceased, and railway communication, except in a few instances, is normal.

Reports that a state of siege had been proclaimed were denied tonight. It was said that even in the districts where the gravest disorders had occurred there had been no recourse to martial law.

Ancona, since the outbreak there last Saturday, has been calm under strict military and police surveillance.

Mobs of anarchists, profiting by the scarcity of troops in the city, sacked the Constitutional Club in Ravenna and destroyed autograph portraits of King Victor Emmanuel and Queen Helena which hung on the walls. This act of vandalism gave the movement in Ravenna a revolutionary character, but order was soon restored there on the arrival of Gen. Ciancio, Commander of the Army Corps at Bologna, with a strong force of troops.

The City of Forli experienced virtually the same kind of outbreak as Ravenna.

At Naples hoodlums attempted to dominate several quarters of the town and stoned and fired upon the soldiers, who, however, repulsed them.

All around these centres of disorder the bands of rioters when dispersed took to the country and continued their work of destruction, but gradually were dominated by the troops and police.

Train service throughout the country was normal tonight, except in the districts around Ancona, Ravenna, and Forli. All the trains interfered with by the rioters belong to local concerns.

In the rioting everywhere there have been numerous casualties on both sides of the police and troops and the rioters. There have, however, been only two fatalities, aside from those occurring in the course of the general strike.

There was a renewed attempt tonight to bring about a railway strike in Florence and Bologna. The attempt was frustrated, however, and only delayed the departure of trains.

The sitting of the Chamber of Deputies this evening was a stormy one. The extremist Deputies hurled all kinds of invectives against the Government and police. Signor Lucci, Deputy for Naples, brought into the Chamber a piece of linen stained with blood of "a proletarian victim," wounded by the bullet of a soldier, which he threw on the floor.

Signor Salandra, the Premier, protested in the name of the country against insults to the Army, declaring that if Italy had not cause for grief mourning it was due to the coolness of her soldiers and officers. The Premier received an ovation at the conclusion of his speech.

LIMIT PHONE APPRAISAL.

Valuation of New York Co. Property to be Confined to City.

The valuation of the property of the New York Telephone Company for the purposes of the rate inquiry of the Public Service Commission of the Second District is to be confined to the telephones of New York City. This was decided yesterday at a conference at the offices of the commission in the Metropolitan Life Building of Commissioners Martin S. Decker and William Temple Emmet, John L. Swayze, attorney for the New York Telephone Company; Corporation Counsel Frank L. Polk, and the representatives of a number of civic organizations.

The company had wished that the appraisal should take in the entire State. In its view, to conduct a satisfactory investigation of rates it is necessary to consider both the tariff and the toll services rendered by the telephones—that is, the use that is made for any given line for purely local and for long-distance purposes. Consequently, the inquiry should, in the company's view, cover a wide area. It is expected, however, that it will accept the ruling of the commission and there will not be any necessity to issue a mandatory order.

An appropriation bill carrying $100,000 for the purposes of this inquiry is now before Gov. Glynn, and as soon as he signs it expert engineers and accountants will be set to work on the appraisal. Mr. Polk expressed his intention yesterday of sending a representative to all the hearings. The telephone investigation, he said, was a matter vitally affecting the people of the city, and the City Government wished to participate in it.

State Senator J. F. Duhamel, who represents about fifty South Brooklyn organizations, asked the commission if it would consider appeals from these organizations as the inquiry proceeded. Commissioner Decker replied that the appeals would not assist in the settlement of the matter, but that the commission would be very glad of suggestions.

He was not able to state how long the appraisal would take, but he promised that it would be carried out as speedily as the commission could manage.

POEM AND POSY FOR POLICE.

Grace Church Nursery Girls Give Thanks for Crossing Care.

Two eight-year-old girls from the Grace Church Nursery, 94 Fourth Avenue, accompanied by the Rev. Francisco G. Urbano and a nurse, walked into the office of Chief Inspector Schmittberger at Police Headquarters yesterday morning and, after one had recited a poem expressing the thanks of the children of the nursery to the traffic policemen who had watched over them every day when they crossed the crowded street, the other gave the Inspector a big bouquet of roses. Marie Jocelyn recited the poem and Julia Amato presented the bouquet.

The Inspector thanked the children, and the flowers were then sent to the bedside of Detective Ernest F. W. Seyler, who is in St. Vincent's Hospital, having been shot while trying to arrest an alleged cocaine seller.

PAGE ON AMERICAN TYPE.

Tells London Audience It Has the British as a Background.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 12.—Ambassador Page delivered an address on "Some Aspects of American Democracy" before the Royal Institution tonight, in the course of which he referred to the controversy aroused by the reference in a previous speech to the dominance of the British element in the American population.

"In its amalgamation of men," Mr. Page said, "American democracy so far has produced no clearly cut new type such as would satisfy the ethnologist, but a type that combines the qualities of the North European races of which the British type is the background—the British type that is itself an earlier amalgamation of all these same races.

"The American is an amalgamation, under favorable conditions, of mobile social organization and on a continent yet new enough to offer great freedom of natural opportunity. We believe this amalgamation will preserve the strongest of all these stocks, as your earlier amalgamation did."

Mr. Page said that he often encountered the opinion that American democracy was in danger from its rich men. He derided this contention, asserting that it would be nearer the truth to say that democracy lately, at least, had shown something less than favors to the rich.

"Surely," he said, "it is no distinction merely to be a rich man in the United States. The fact that a man is rich gives him no help toward public advancement. There is, in fact, among our very richest men hardly one who could be elected to the humblest public office."

MILITANTS FIRE A CHURCH.

Create Disturbances in Theatres—New Headquarters Raided.

LONDON, June 12.—A determined attempt was made by militant suffragettes this morning to burn the ancient Church of St. Margaret's at Chipstead, about fourteen miles to the southeast of London. Three distinct fires fed by fire lighters composed of squares of felt saturated with oil were set by the "arson squad."

The rector, the Rev. William H. Stone, and the villagers were soon on the scene and were able to extinguish the flames before much damage had been done to the church, which dates from the twelfth century.

Tonight the militants created disturbances in nearly a dozen theatres in the West End of London, women in each case attempting to make speeches and showering leaflets from balconies upon the audiences. The leaflets drew attention to the torture of women by forcible feeding. The suffragettes were hustled out of the theatres with more speed than ceremony by attendants and indignant auditors.

The police are persisting in their harrying tactics against the militants, to whom they are determined not to give any rest. Today they raided a private house in Kensington where the "wild women" established their headquarters after their offices in Westminster had been invaded and closed a few days ago. Great quantities of papers were seized by the police, but no arrests were made. It was thought that Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst might be in the place, but her whereabouts is still a mystery.

Notwithstanding the attempt yesterday to destroy the coronation chair with a bomb, Westminster Abbey was open as usual today except for the chapel where the bomb was placed and in which an immense amount of soot, dust, and dirt fell as the result of the explosion. A large congregation, composed mostly of women, attended morning service. Extensive precautions were taken and every visitor was closely scrutinized.

WOULD LET WOMEN STARVE.

But Aspinall Says Law Must Be Changed to Apply to Militants.

Butler Aspinall, K. C., a noted English barrister, who arrived from Liverpool yesterday on his way to Canada, said that the actions of the militant suffragettes were "dreadful to contemplate."

"What do you think of the suggestions made in London that the 'wild women' should be allowed to starve themselves to death in prison rather than to enjoy release under the cat and mouse act?" he was asked.

"In order to do that," said Mr. Aspinall, "the laws regarding prisoners would have to be changed. Under the existing ones the Governor of a jail in England is held responsible for the health of the prisoners under his care, and he would not take the responsibility of allowing women prisoners to starve to death. The only way would be to pass a short act of Parliament relieving the Governor of his responsibility in special cases, and I think that it would be passed now by both the Lords and the Commons."

Charged with Murdering Family.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PANAMA, June 12.—William Reid, a negro, who arrived from Costa Rica yesterday in custody of the local police, is charged with the murder of a family of five Panamanians, resident at Bocas del Toro, a few weeks ago.

GREECE TELLS TURKS TO STOP EXPULSIONS

War Threat by Premier Venizelos Cheered in Chamber of Deputies at Athens.

NAVAL RESERVES CALLED

Hellenic Ships in Black Sea Ordered Home—Bourse Closed by Government Because of Uncertainty.

ATHENS, Greece, June 12.—A warning to Turkey which fell little short of a formal declaration of hostilities was uttered today by Premier Venizelos of Greece in the Chamber of Deputies. He was speaking on the treatment of Greek subjects in Turkey.

The Premier's attitude showed that the tension between Greece and Turkey was near the breaking point and that the danger of war was imminent.

M. Venizelos, who obviously found difficulty in restraining his language when he spoke of the way in which the Turks had treated his fellow-countrymen, said:

"I do not wish to allow to escape me words which cannot be recalled, but I should fail in my duty if I did not inform the Chamber of Deputies that the situation has become grave—even very grave. If a stop is not put to these conditions the Hellenic Government will be forced not to content itself with joining in the lamentations of unhappy refugees."

Thousands of Refugees.

Loud and prolonged cheers throughout the Chamber greeted the statement of the Premier, who added that thousands of Greek refugees had reached the homeland already from Turkey, while thousands more were only awaiting transportation facilities in order to escape from their persecutors. Such a situation, he declared, could not be borne much longer.

The Premier characterized the Turkish persecutions of Greeks as being "of a character such as history had never known until today, their object being the elimination of populations which had been living in those places for several thousand years."

M. Venizelos said the attention of Turkey had been repeatedly called to the alarming reports from these persecutions but the Turkish Government's only reply was to attribute the movement to vengeance for the alleged sufferings of the Mussulman populations in Macedonia. He estimated the number of Greek refugees who had already arrived in Greece or were awaiting transport at about 100,000, all of whom he declared were abandoning their entire possessions in order to escape persecution.

The Government has demanded from Turkey payment of $50,000 damages for loss suffered by Mr. Tricoupis, a Greek subject, at the hands of the Turks on his estates in Asia Minor.

In agreement with the National Bank and the Bourse committee, the Government today ordered the Bourse closed on account of the uncertainty of the situation.

LONDON, June 12.—The threat of another Greco-Turkish war did not come as a surprise to diplomats here today. It was pointed out that events in the Near East during recent months had been kindling the strongest animosities between the two peoples.

Greece accuses Turkey of the wholesale expulsion with great cruelties of Greek Christians from the province of Thrace, while Turkey accuses Greece of oppressing former Turkish subjects in the region of Salonica, which was taken by the Greeks in the recent Balkan war. Only recently the Greek Patriarch threatened to remove the headquarters of the Church from Constantinople.

Messages from Athens today state that one class of the Greek naval reserves has been called out ostensibly to participate in fleet manoeuvres. Greek shipowners have telegraphed instructions to the Commanders of their steamers in the Black Sea to pass through the Dardanelles immediately and return to Greek waters.

Turkey's Two Dreadnoughts.

Turkey has a 23,000-ton battleship ordered from Vickers Sons & Maxim at Barrow-in-Furness, England, and a 25,000-ton ship, bought from Brazil, which is being constructed in an English yard and will be in commission at the end of the Summer.

Greece has a battleship building in Germany, but it will take two years to complete it, and should she obtain the two old American battleships—the Idaho and Mississippi—they would be no match, it is believed, for Turkey's new dreadnoughts.

The Daily Telegraph's naval correspondent suggests that the real reason for the attitude of Greece against Turkey is a desire to obtain mastery of the Aegean Sea before the new Turkish dreadnoughts are ready for sea.

The Greek minister to Great Britain had an interview yesterday with Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Minister, to whom he explained the attitude of the Greek Government.

The Daily Telegraph Athens correspondent says the Greek Minister in Constantinople has been instructed to demand the cessation of persecutions of Greeks in Asia Minor and the reinstatement in their homes and on their properties of 50,000 refugees, who sought shelter from the Turks in Greek territory. A guarantee also is demanded, according to the correspondent, that these refugees be not again molested.

A reported attack by Turkish regulars and a force of Bashi-Bazouks on the town of Aivalik, Asia Minor, is denied. It is said that instructions from Constantinople to the Turkish troops arrived in time to prevent the attack.

A conference between the Russian and Rumanian Ministers has been planned to take place at Bucharest, Rumania, next week to endeavor to prevent the breaking out of war.

A general meeting of the Islamic Society was held in London on Wednesday to protest against "the systematic extermination of the Moslam population of the Balkans pursued by various Balkan States, especially Greece."

LEE ON JULY 4 COMMITTEE.

Supervisor of Recreation to Head the Atlantic League.

Martin W. Littleton, Chairman of the committee appointed by the Mayor to manage the safe and sane Fourth of July celebrations, yesterday appointed William J. Lee, Supervisor of Recreation, to be Chairman of the Athletic League in place of James E. Sullivan, who is attending the International Conference on Athletics at Lyons, France.

The major part of the celebration will be held in the public parks and playgrounds, and will consist of band concerts, athletic games, and children's festivals. Gov. Glynn, Mayor Mitchel, and Representative Champ Clark are to speak at City Hall Park at 10 A. M.

There will be 500 sets of gold, silver, and bronze medals to be contested for in athletic games, and silver cups for baseball championships. Mr. Lee received an invitation from John B. Foster, Secretary of the New York National League Baseball Club, to send several thousand of his best baseball players, to witness the games at the Polo Grounds on Flag Day, June 15. The boys are to appear in uniform and to be admitted free.

Official Timer—W. Struther Jones.

The first polo match of the international cup series between England and America will be played at Meadow Brook this afternoon at 4 o'clock. The weather indications point to a fair day and somewhat cooler than it has been for the past few days, with moderate northwest to north winds. The Westchester Cup, the polo trophy, is now held by the American team, having been won at Hurlingham in 1909. Both teams rested yesterday, but the ponies were exercised. The polo field is in excellent shape, the final touches to the green velvety lawn being made yesterday. The members of the American team spent most of the day on Harry Payne Whitney's yacht, while the English players took a motor trip over the Long Island roads.

It was stated last night that H. L. Herbert, Chairman of the Polo Association, who has worked constantly for the success of the international matches, had been taken ill with ptomaine poisoning, and would be removed to his country place at Lakewood today.

Although the odds in the wagering favor the American team 7 to 5, this is due principally to the injuries and subsequent delays experienced by the English team rather than to any particular strength of the defending four over the challengers. Had the first game been played last Tuesday, as originally scheduled, the two teams would have taken the field on virtually even terms so far as the wagering was concerned. Yesterday there was a slight tendency, however, to favor the home combination because of the severe injury received by Capt. Leslie St. Claire Cheape last Sunday, which necessitated postponing Tuesday's game until today, and the report that the condition of the English ponies has not been benefited by the delay.

Lord Wimborne has intimated that these upsets in the schedule have not improved the chances of the challengers, but that the team will enter today's game confident of its ability to give the American four a hard contest and with a fair chance of winning the first match of the series. Capt. Cheape, who will play at No. 2, had his first practice Thursday after the accident of Sunday, when he was hit by a lofted polo ball, his eye closed, cheek gashed and nose cartilage dislocated. In this final workout he played with his accustomed dash, but apparently had some difficulty in seeing the ball at times.

The physician who has been treating Capt. Cheape's injuries stated yesterday, however, that the British star will enter the game in condition to play his position without handicap. The other players, Capt. Vivian Lockett and H. A. Tomkinson, together with Major F. W. Barrett, are fit for the hard struggle expected.

The same cannot be said, however, of the English string of ponies, if the grooms' reports are to be believed. It is said that the challengers' mounts, which had been expected to be at the top of their form at this time, if the match had been started on the day originally planned, are beginning to feel the effects of the American climate and particularly the hot spell of the past few days. In addition, several have developed strained tendons and bruises during the practice which the English team has held since its arrival here on June 1. The grooms now fear that every day will take a little of the speed and stamina from the invaders' mounts.

The American players and ponies, on the other hand, are on edge and although the 1914 four is not considered as strong as that of last year, it is thought that the two Waterburys, Lawrence and J. M., Devereux Milburn and Rene La Montagne will be able to match or possibly outrank the English team either in offensive or defensive play. This margin of safety or superiority is conceded to be slight and it looks as if much would depend upon which four succeeds in getting the jump at the opening bell of the play.

The absence of former Capt. Harry Payne Whitney from the defending combination has weakened the "Big Four," since the players were thoroughly accustomed to each others' style, and the team work was superb. Whitney, too, was a leader possessing extraordinary ability and a polo general of rare skill.

While three of the four players who regained the International Polo Challenge Cup in England in 1909 and successfully defended it in 1911 and 1913 are again in the line-up, the fourth player, Rene La Montagne, has yet to earn his international spurs. If he rises to the occasion, the problem of the defense of the cup will be simplified.

The uncertainty that lends zest to the contest has caused a record sale of seats assuring an attendance of fully 40,000 spectators at the Meadow Brook field today. The leading hotels of both this city and Long Island were filled last night with polo enthusiasts, many of whom have come from distant parts of the country to witness the play. All the boxes were sold weeks ago. Seats are at a premium, even in the end stands erected to accommodate the overflow, and ticket speculators are offering big bonuses for desirable sections in the east and west stands.

PRAISE OUR SPORTSMANSHIP.

Daily Mail Pays Tribute to Americans for Postponing Polo Match.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 12.—Polo rather than the Panama Tolls Repeal bill was the subject of the editorial comments in this morning's papers. The Daily Mail pays a tribute to the courtesy and fine sense of sportsmanship shown by the American authorities in postponing the first match. "Without Cheape the defeat of the English side was assured. With him in the field an English victory is not beyond expectation and hope.

"If Wimborne's team rides off the field as winners to-morrow afternoon their country will have abundant reason to be proud of them, for they have to meet the finest skill and the most lavish expenditure in procuring ponies, but if not we shall not grudge the Americans a victory which they will have deserved by generosity, combination, and hard work."

GIVES JURY LOVE LETTERS.

Court Decides That Mrs. Holman's Epistles Are Proper Exhibits.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, June 12.—Mrs. Elizabeth A. C. Holman was defeated this afternoon in her attempt to keep from the jury her fervid letters to her present husband, Frederick Ernest Holman, written while she was the wife of the Rev. Cranston Brenton of Yonkers, who she is suing for $50,000 damages. Mrs. Holman alleges that Brenton kidnapped her, in conspiracy with his two co-defendants, Dr. Paul Waterman and Dr. Oliver C. Smith of Hartford, on September 3, 1912, and imprisoned her in a Brattleboro, Vt., madhouse until she confessed wrongdoing with Holman.

Superintendent S. E. Lawton, of the asylum, two former nurses, Mr. Brenton's mother, Mrs. Orvetta H. Brenton, and his sister, Mrs. Laura Brenton MacDonald, both of Yonkers, testified for him today.

Judge Thomas this afternoon decided to admit the letters as exhibits for the jury.

Just before court adjourned this afternoon Mr. Wells read this exhibit written on the blank of a notary public:

F. Ernest Holman, Notary Public,
County of Knox, City of Rockland, Me.

On this thirteenth day of November, 1907, personally appeared Elizabeth Alden Curtis and Frederic Ernest Holman, and after making oath, stated as follows: That they are mate; that on the sixteenth day of December, 1914, they are to take a little ride together and be henceforth no more parted, and that they have dreamed and fought for this for fourteen years and are, by reason of every law of God and man, entitled

HEARD MISS WINTER HINT AT SUICIDE

Friends Say She Was Jealous of Reese's Girl Acquaintances and Often Despondent.

HOLDS TO MURDER THEORY

State Attorney Denies Reese's Statements and Pushes Investigation of Mystery.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., June 12.—Regardless of the general belief that Miss Ella G. Winter, whose body was found in Curtis Creek last Monday, committed suicide, State Attorney Green of Anne Arundel County holds to the theory of murder, and D. Meredith Reese, Jr., is under the strictest surveillance.

"I don't care what Mr. Reese or any one else may think," said Mr. Green tonight. "I do not believe Miss Winter committed suicide. I will not say what I do believe caused her death, but it was not suicide."

Statements made today by friends of Miss Winter, tending to prove a strong motive for suicide, are not deterring Mr. Green and Sheriff Potee in their investigation of the mystery.

Reese veered today from his former statement that he believed Miss Winter's death was accidental, and said he now believed she committed suicide. He said he had not advanced this belief before because of his regard for the young woman's family.

Reese's belief was backed up strongly by Mrs. Jennie Herald of 1,614 St. Paul Street. Mrs. Herald said she met Miss Winter on the street two weeks ago, and that the girl was then crying. She told Mrs. Herald she was crying because of the attentions Reese was paying to another woman. Mrs. Herald said that the girl was very despondent, and exclaimed: "I know Mr. Reese is never going to marry me."

Mrs. Herald's daughter, Miss Ruth Herald, said:

"Ella was a melancholy girl, although she would have brief periods of gayety. She often cried and frequently it was about Mr. Reese. She once told me—about two years ago—not to be surprised if I heard she had ended her life."

Sheriff Potee will see Miss Herald and Mrs. Herald tomorrow and get statements from them. He will also see Mrs. Frank Cornet, wife of the janitor at the Baltimore-Corinthian Yacht Club, whose name was given out by Reese today. Mrs. Cornet knew Miss Winter, and said the girl frequently was despondent.

Today Sheriff Potee questioned all the servants in the Walbert apartments, where the Reese family lives.

Under close questioning today Reese denied emphatically that he was engaged to Miss Winter, and said he had never given her any jewelry except a small pin. He said he bought the hat that she wore when she was drowned, but denied that he had given her a diamond ring. While admitting that Miss Winter had cried several times recently on leaving his boat, he said he never noticed that she was despondent. Despite his denial that he was engaged to marry Miss Winter, her mother and several of her friends insist that the couple were engaged.

Reese said that the last time Miss Winter was at the boat, previous to Thursday, was on Tuesday, June 3, and that he or Mac Isaac, his friend, had taken her ashore. He was reminded that John Rice, cook on the house boat, had said he had met Miss Winter on the wharf on Tuesday or Wednesday night, and had taken her to and from the house boat.

"That may be true," said Reese. "He may have taken her to and from the boat."

Regarding the report that he had discharged Rice on Friday, Reese said he had been misquoted, and that he had discharged Rice on Monday morning, after the house-boat party had been broken up.

"When I called on Mrs. Winter on Saturday morning," he said, "she told me that she had noticed that her daughter had been despondent lately, and when I later went to her brother Al. at Lexington Market, the first thing he said to me was, 'I guess she jumped overboard.'

"I never gave Miss Winter any jewelry except a small pin. The ring she bought herself. She may have told her mother I gave it to her, but that is not true. I never promised to marry her and there was no engagement between use, and she knew it. She also knew I had several other young women friends, but if she was jealous she never spoke about them."

That Miss Winter was jealous seems to be substantiated by the statement of Mrs. Julia Cornet.

"Last March, when Miss Winter told me that Mr. Reese intended to have his parents on the boat for two weeks in June," said Mrs. Cornet, "Miss Winter said, 'That will be a lonely two weeks for me.' I asked her if she did not intend to visit the boat while they were there, and she said she probably would not. She said she would have to find something to occupy her mind at that time.

"She said she would stay away while his family was on the boat, but would not give him up for any woman. 'If any one else gets his affection I don't wan to live,' she said. Miss Winter told me about being with Reese one night at the Victoria Theatre. The other woman was there, and Miss Winter saw her as they came out. Miss Winter told me that she looked at the other woman. 'If looks could have done harm,' Miss inter told me, 'I don't know what my looks would have done to that woman.'

"Miss Winter came down here every Sunday all the Winter. When she first came down she looked so pale I once spoke to her about it and she said: 'I look badly because I grieve over him. When there was another woman going on the boat and associating with him I became ill. I was tempted to take my life.'

"I told her not to think of doing anything of the kind. She said, 'I idolize Dave.' She said she had a brother who opposed her coming down here. But she said, 'I don't care. I shall come anyway. I am so glad when Saturday afternoon comes; I live through the week for that time. I always feel better when I leave him. If I thought he slighted me I would not care to live.'"

Mrs. Cornet said that the last time Miss Winter spoke of committing suicide was in March.

MRS. CHAPMAN CLEARED.

Libel Charge Against President of Rubinstein Club Dismissed.

Magistrate Naumer of Brooklyn yesterday gave a decision in which he cleared Mrs. Emma L. Chapman, President of the Rubinstein Club of Manhattan, of the charge of criminal libel made against her by G. Dexter Richardson, manager of a concert bureau in Brooklyn.

Mrs. Chapman was arrested on May 11 on a warrant obtained by Richardson. He based his charge on a letter written by Mrs. Chapman to Municipal Court Justice Farrar, who had under consideration a suit brought by Richardson against her.

FIVE HELD FOR COURT FOR BASEBALL POOL

Three Prosecutions in Brooklyn and Two in Manhattan Under Lottery Law.

TWO OF THEM YOUNG WOMEN

First Results of Police Crusade Against Sale of Gambling Tickets to Boys.

Milo Bogard, 55 years of age, of 6310 Fifteenth Avenue, his daughter Gladys, 18 years old, and George Keenan, 12 years old, of 395 Fulton Street, were arraigned yesterday in the Butler Street Court in Brooklyn, charged with violating the lottery laws in offering prizes in connection with the result of baseball games, and held in $500 bail for examination on June 18 by Magistrate Voorhees.

Bogard conducts what is known as the Baseball News Company, which professes to give baseball news at the rate of twenty-five cents per week. On the payment of the subscription price a score card and premium certificate is given to each subscriber. On the score card is a list of all the baseball clubs in the National, American, Federal and International Leagues. A hole is punched opposite the name of one club in each league. Prizes for low and high scores for the combined teams marked are offered. The prizes range from $5 to $1,000. In all $5,000 a week is offered in premiums.

Many complaints were received by Deputy Police Commissioner Godley from persons who said that offering the prizes violated the lottery laws. He assigned Lieut. Thomas McDonald of his staff to investigate. McDonald, with several detectives, subscribed to the news service and got score cards. After satisfying himself that the law was being violated, the lieutenant ordered the arrests.

Bogard and his daughter were found at the office of the concern at 16 Court Street. Keenan was taken at his Fulton Street address.

Bogard said yesterday that he did not think his method violated the law. He said a newspaper story he read several days ago gave him the first intimation that there was any objection to his business. He said the same scheme had been carried on in all the important cities of the country for three years.

The police say that many clients of the Baseball News Company were boys and that the offering of prizes had a bad effect upon them. It is known that many city employees have been subscribing to the service.

William Amos, who said he was a clerk, living at 455 East 138th Street, and Nellie Morgan, 22 years old, of 1893 St. John's Place, were held in $500 bail each yesterday by Magistrate Corrigan in the Tombs Court. Amos was arrested by Anthony Comstock and Miss Morgan was arrested by Louis H. Nenich, a Brooklyn detective, who has been getting evidence against baseball pool operators under the orders of Commissioner Woods.

HARPERS BOOKS

Cross Trails
By Herman Whitaker
A stirring novel of the Canadian Northwest. In the white world of a Hudson Bay lumber-camp turbulent scenes and chivalry surround the only woman snowbound there. She witnesses a mutiny of the lumberjacks which is quelled by the Viking-like superintendent, and discovers that for months she must be cooped up with the one man in the world she wishes to avoid. A vivid transcription of the life which the author knows so well.

At the Casa Napoleon
By Thomas A. Janvier
Here is the charm which hovers over the passing away of a quaint and rare existence. And no writer but Janvier could have made this bit of bygone New York so real and desirable. Though the scene is New York, it is a New York new and full of interest with a life almost as foreign as that of some small European town. In reading of the dwellers in the Casa Napoleon—mostly Latins—you realize what discoveries the metropolis offers to those in search of exotic flavor.

The Price of Love
By Arnold Bennett
An entirely new kind of who-stole-the-money story, told at lightning speed. In the first pages the reader is brought face to face with an extraordinary situation. The interest which the six characters find in all the details of life is intense—Bennett's own contagious interest. Youthful love, youthful intolerance, youthful oblivion of all but self and the moment, are embodied in the heroine.
A special de luxe edition printed on thin paper, with many illustrations, has been issued, besides the regular edition.

The Marryers
By Irving Bacheller
"There is a vein of delicious burlesque in the book, and yet the characters are delightfully convincing."—Boston Herald. "The author of 'Keeping Up With Lizzie' has put much humor into this latest volume."—Kansas City Star. "His humor keeps bubbling up like a perennial spring, and his quaint philosophy is so entertaining."—Detroit Journal. "The book will serve a most beneficial purpose—that of making people merry and the world therefore better."—Salt Lake City Tribune.

Good Form for All Occasions
By Florence Howe Hall
The author presents in this little volume for men and women a valuable counsellor to all who desire to follow the proper dictates of social requirements. She begins with the week-end visits and the duties of both hostess and guest. Next follow chapters devoted to teas, receptions, formal and informal dinners, luncheons and anniversaries, weddings, public dinners, receptions, balls, and card parties. The appropriate clothes for each occasion are specified, and the form of invitation shown.

FOUND NO SHOCK IN MRS. POSS'S GARB

SAW ONLY A TORN KIMONO

This the Defendant Wore Before the Jury—Blue Knickerbockers Not In Evidence.

Outside of the courtroom, where the trial of the Poss divorce suit is being heard, a large crowd gathered yesterday morning. For the news had spread that Mrs. Lillian K. Poss, the defendant in the case, would wear the costume which her husband criticised in his complaint. After every available seat inside Justice Donnelly's courtroom had been filled, and there had been much jostling and standing on tip-toe on the part of those kept outside, it was learned that Mrs. Poss would not appear in her knickerbockers and kimono until the afternoon session.

The crowd in the courtroom felt repaid for the long wait, though, when, at the beginning of the afternoon session, George Gordon Battle, who represents Mrs. Poss in the divorce suit brought by Frank R. Poss, announced that his client would appear forthwith in the costume in which she entertained Percy M. Thorn, the co-respondent, on the occasion of her husband's raid. Mrs. Poss then entered the room wearing a kimono of pale blue silk, embroidered with birds and flowers. No knickerbockers were visible.

Mrs. Poss turned about several times for the benefit of the jurymen, and pointed out to them several long rents in the kimono. These, she asserted, were made by Mr. Poss when he attacked her on the morning of the raid. The jurymen seemed quite absorbed in the costume, and one of the jurors motioned aside a court attendant who was obscuring his view. There was an exodus from the courtroom after Mrs. Poss resumed her ordinary apparel.

Most of yesterday's session was given over to the cross-examination of Mrs. Poss by Abraham Levy, counsel for Mr. Poss. Mr. Levy produced the diary notes which Mrs. Poss had made on the backs of checks, and showed that there were discrepancies between her accounts of her doings written there and her statements made on the witness stand. Mr. Levy pointed out that on Feb. 11 Mrs. Poss and Mr. Thorn, according to the diary, had gone to a chop suey restaurant together, but that Mrs. Poss had testified she had gone home. Similarly, Mr. Levy brought out the fact that she had testified she had gone home on a certain night, when the diary told of her having gone to Carlton Terrace. Mrs. Poss, in her diary, said that she had gone to bed early on Lincoln's Birthday, but admitted to Mr. Levy that she had gone to the Claridge with Mr. Thorn.

Mr. Levy asked Mrs. Poss if she considered it discreet to be found in her rooms in Mr. Thorn's company, dressed in a kimono. Mrs. Poss said that she did not consider that she had been indiscreet. Then she cried a little, and said that she could not keep back the tears when she thought of her husband's conduct on the occasion of the raid. She said that she had frequently entertained men visitors in her kimono, that being her regular costume when she felt ill. Mrs. Poss said that she had run into her room, when her husband found her and Mr. Thorn together, in order that she might safeguard her jewels. She thought, she said, that her husband, in his anger, might take them away from her.

"Between Mr. Thorn and me," Mrs. Poss asserted, "the relationship was reciprocal and mutual in good feelings. I liked him because he was cultured and entertaining, like friends like that." Mrs. Poss said that her husband's income was $84,000 a year, and that she was now receiving from him $300 a month.

In the afternoon the counter suit for divorce, which Mrs. Poss is bringing, was opened by George Gordon Battle, Mrs. Poss's lawyer. He first called Ira D. Heacock of 201 West 105th Street and Stanley R. Greenidge, an elevator boy there, as witnesses. Mr. Heacock said that he was a friend of Mr. Poss and that Mr. Poss had frequently visited him there. Greenidge testified that several women had visited the flat while Mr. Poss was there.

"What did these women look like?" he was asked.

"They looked pretty good to me," said Greenidge.

He then told of having seen women leaving the Heacock flat in the early hours of the morning while Mr. Poss was a guest there. One night, he said Mr. Poss and Mr. Heacock and two women came down stairs and drove off in an automobile together.

The case was adjourned until Monday, when the attorneys on both sides, it is expected, will present the case to the jury.

Matt McGrath Seeks Job.

Matt McGrath, world's champion hammer thrower, who is seeking reinstatement on the police force of this city, will apply to the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, on Monday for a writ of certiorari to review the testimony taken at his trial when District Attorney James C. Cropsey was Police Commissioner. McGrath was dismissed from the force by Cropsey.

MONATON MEN HELD FOR MISUSING MAILS

Looker and McLaughlin, President and Director of Realty Concern, Give $2,500 Bail.

POOR PEOPLE THE VICTIMS

Criminal Cases Independent of Suit Lost by Attorney General in State Courts.

Pierre M. Looker, President, and D. Maujer McLaughlin, a Director in the Monaton Realty Investing Corporation of 220 West Forty-second Street, appeared yesterday before Judge Grubb in the Federal District Court and pleaded not guilty to an indictment found last January charging conspiracy to use the mails to defraud. They were released in $2,500 bail each.

The Monaton Realty Investing Company is now in the hands of Max Morgenthau, Jr., receiver appointed by Justice Bijur in the State Supreme Court on February 26. The frauds with which the defendants are charged have nothing to do with those proceedings and are estimated by the Federal authorities at $1,000,000.

The company was incorporated in 1907 by McLaughlin and E. J. McCormack. The latter retired, and Looker became President. It is capitalized at $1,000,000, divided into 2,500 common shares and 7,500 preferred shares of $100 par value. It then issued a number of different kinds of securities, 4 per cent. profit-sharing premium certificates of the value of $100; 6 per cent. coupon gold certificates of $1,000; accumulative profit-sharing certificates of from $100 to $5,000, and 6 per cent. exchangeable certificates of $10. It also sold its preferred stock on the instalment plan.

In marketing these securities the company said it was using its funds to purchase New York real estate, and was earning good profits. Among the apartment houses it professed to own were the Richelieu, 126 Greene Avenue, Brooklyn; the Highland, Amsterdam Avenue and 135th Street; 1,062-74 Park Place, Brooklyn; the Pavonazza, 152d Street and Broadway; the Reichard, 141st Street and Seventh Avenue, and the Medina, 189 Claremont Avenue.

It is alleged by the Federal authorities that these buildings were mortgaged to the limit, and could not possibly be run at a profit.

By such representations as these, it is alleged, the company attracted many small investors. Post Office Inspector Mayhew said that two of the most successful canvassers among persons of small means were the Rev. John C. Chapman, who had been a Presbyterian minister at Hackettstown and edited the Monaton Monthly, and the Rev. Charles I. Nash, a Baptist preacher. They and other canvassers worked through the churches, the fraternal organizations and the Christian Scientists. They induced servant girls to part with their savings and talked over fathers who were struggling to get together a little money to send their sons to college.

While this was going on it is alleged that Looker, as President, was drawing $10,000 a year. When Max Morgenthau, Jr., took charge of the company last February he found not enough money to pay accountants to go over the books.

The decline and fall of the company were traced in an affidavit made in the suit brought by the Attorney General, by Gustave Lange, an attorney, who investigated the concern. The last financial statement, made Dec. 31, 1912, said the company owned improved Manhattan and Brooklyn real estate worth $1,890,858, but Mr. Lange could not find anything of value.

The suit by the Attorney General was on the ground that it had no right to run a banking business as well as a realty business, but he lost in the State Court of Appeals. Mr. Hartridge explained yesterday that that had nothing to do with the Federal action based on the criminal aspect of the company's operations.

SMALLPOX CASE WALKS IN.

Man with Disease Goes to Health Office for Certificate.

There was much excitement in the Health Department building yesterday afternoon when it was discovered that a man who had come for a certificate of health was suffering from smallpox. The patient said he was Max Acharya of 354 West Tenth Street, 32 years old, a native of India.

Acharya went into the office of Dr. Dunckel, Chief of the Bureau of Infectious Diseases, and told him that he had been in a hospital on Staten Island since May 26. A few days ago he was discharged as cured, though he could not remember his ailment. "I had a good position and I can get it again if I can bring a certificate of health," he said.

Dr. Dunckel examined his caller and found him suffering from smallpox. He was detained under police guard until an ambulance took him to the Kingston Avenue Hospital.

The elevator and several rooms in the building were fumigated and employes who had not been vaccinated before were inoculated.

LOSING DAY FOR NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN BASEBALL CLUBS---TURF

CUBS SPILL GIANTS INTO 7 TO 6 DEFEAT

Uncle Tom Needham Helps to Humble Home Folks at Polo Grounds.

Uncle Tom Needham was put to work yesterday at the Polo Grounds by Henry O'Day, who is still managing the Cubs. Needham was planted right behind the plate, where he had to catch everything the Chicago pitchers flung at him. Tom has been a ball player for many years, by association, but not in reality. He's been going around with the Cubs for ever so long, just to keep them company. He hoped to wind up his career without having to work at his profession, but when Roger Bresnahan was fired out of the game by Umpire Hart, there was nothing else for Hank O'Day to do but apologize to Needham and asked him if he wouldn't please catch for a little while.

Needham had more or less to do in checking a Giant rally in the eighth inning and by so doing, it happened that the Cubs won a long drawn out ball game by a score of 7 to 6.

The Giants, like many other ball players, have always regarded Needham simply as a piece of Chicago scenery, so when he went in to catch, they had an idea that all they had to do was to have a picnic on the bases. They found that Tom can use his hands for something besides playing poker. It was the first time in years that he had ever had a chance to throw to second, but he nipped Larry Doyle in the eighth and ninth innings and mussed up all hope of the Giants tieing up the score.

After that, some scout is apt to drift along and grab Needham and sign him for a steady job.

It would be unreasonable to expect Heinie Zimmerman to play more than one or two games at a stretch without being fired off the meadow. In the third inning, Umpire Charley Rigler called the great "Zim" out on strikes, and what Heinie said about Rigler's eyes was a shame. The "Zim" didn't have to repeat as Rigler got it all the first time.

"Get right out of my Polo Grounds; mope along," said the umpire.

Zimmerman came right back at him with a remark which was to the effect that as an umpire, Rigler wore a No. 5 hat and that he never could umpire, but yesterday he was worse than usual.

Rigler had great control and waited patiently for five minutes while the Chicago team escorted himself across the field to the clubhouse. He mumbled to himself all the way. Heinie is just as fond of umpires as he is of snakes.

Roger Bresnahan faded from the game in the seventh, when Umpire Hart called him out after he tried to beat out a bunt. Where Roger ever got the impression that he was a sprinter, goodness only knows. He goes down to first like Truck No. 6 going to a fire. When Hart called Roger out, the former Dook of the Looey made a holler like a boy getting a tooth yanked. Hart then told him to go to the clubhouse and have a game of hearts with Heinie "Zim."

The Cubs put a crimp in Jeff Tesreau in the fifth and sixth innings and Art Fromme took up the regular duty of losing the game. Some time Fromme will get into a game when the score board isn't all spotted up with runs and will get an awful shock.

The Cubs got after Jeff early. With two out in the first, Saier and Zimmerman singled and the latter advanced a base on a wild pitch. Both scored on Schulte's rap to right. Jimmy Lavender did some weird pitching in the second inning. He was suddenly stricken with wildness and was as untamed as a bucking mustang. He turned loose three wild heaves and gave two bases on balls, but the Giants couldn't score.

In the third inning Lavender tried to stop a burner off Merkle's bat and smashed his hand all up, so Humphries had to pitch. Bescher was safe when Schulte missed his short fly. He went to second on a wild pitch. Burns skied to Schulte and Grant singled and stole second. Doyle walked. Bescher tallied on Merkle's hit and Lavender retired with a mussed hand. Grant scored while Snodgrass was being thrown out at first base and Stock's double to right scored Doyle and Merkle.

With two out in the fourth Bresnahan and Humphries walked, Roger counting on Leach's single. Tesreau started to be bad in the fifth, when he walked Phelan and Phelan singled. Schulte singled, scoring Saier, while Phelan went across on Sweeney's sacrifice fly. That tied the score. Two more came to the Cubs in the sixth and put them in front. Leach singled and scored on Good's triple. Good went through on Saier's sacrifice fly.

Tom Needham edged into the picture in the eighth inning. Doyle got an infield hit and Needham threw him out trying to steal. Merkle got an infield tap and Snodgrass and Schulte walked, filling the bases. That was the end of Humphries and Larry Cheney took up the pitching burden. Manager McGraw rushed to the third base coaching box and encouraged the rally.

Snodgrass scored while Meyers was being thrown out at first, and "Red" Murray, batting for Fromme, got a pass. "Red" stole second. McGraw walked up to Bescher and whispered something in his ear. He asked him what time it was. Bescher went out, Sweeney to Saier. Thus endeth the rally.

George "Hooks" Wiltse, who hasn't been noticed pitching in a long time, sent the Cubs down one, two, three in the last inning. The score:

Phillies' Long Drives Down Reds.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., June 12.—Long drives by Philadelphia caused the defeat of Cincinnati here today by 5 to 1. Four hits, two of which were doubles and one a triple, were made off Ames, who was taken off the rubber in the third inning. His successor, Davenport, was touched up for two doubles, a home run and a single, and he was succeeded by Koestner at the start of the fifth inning. The latter did not yield a hit during the remainder of the game. Mayer kept Cincinnatis hits scattered and was given excellent support, especially by Magee, who accepted eleven chances without an error. Score:

Vlox Cracks a Rib; Pirates Lose.

BOSTON, June 12.—Boston defeated Pittsburgh today 5 to 3, and with this victory the Braves for the first time this season have won four straight games. Vlox, the Pirates' second baseman, sustained a cracked rib during a collision with Gilbert at second base in the third inning. He was taken to a hospital where it was said he would be unable to play for two weeks. Two home runs in the seventh inning, one by Gilbert and the other by Connolly decided the game for Boston. Gilbert's drive went over a screen which tops the fence in right field. It was one of the longest hits ever made on the grounds. Two of the visitors' runs resulted from a balk by Perdue, when there was a runner on third base, and an error by Schmidt, in the seventh inning. There was much wrangling between players of both teams and Umpire Klem. The score:

BROWNS' BATSMEN IN FINE FETTLE

They All Take a Whack or Two at Yankees' Pitchers and Win, 9 to 3.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 12.—The Yankees were buried today under a mass of St. Louis base hits and lost again 9 to 3. Fisher and King Cole were the pitching victims, while Baumgardner was on the winning side. The Browns' pitcher surely was lucky, for it looked as if the Yankees would have "gotten his goat" in the latter innings, had he not had such a lead. He wobbled a bit early, but settled down when his mates began to clout the ball.

Maisel hit Baumgardner regularly, but his mates could not do so well. Maisel opened the game auspiciously with a double on the first ball pitched, and Peckinbaugh a minute later hammered him home.

Maisel and Harry Williams hit safely in the third, bringing in another run, and the last Yankee counter appeared in the eighth inning when Hartzell doubled and scored on Cook's bunt, which the Browns' infield failed to handle.

The New York infield also looked bad toward the latter part of the game, letting the Browns handle them about as they pleased. All through the game the Browns kept taking long chances on the bases, and while this made the Yankees' nervous it also kept the Browns' score down, as in numerous instances a batter hammering a run or so across the plate would be trying to grab off an extra base.

Leary, a first baseman, continued behind the bat today and seemed to have gotten his bearings better. He kept the Yankees from stealing bases to any extent, whereas yesterday the only thing he kept them from hooking was his glove. Cole displaced Fisher in the fifth inning and he got the worst drubbing of the two.

In the fourth inning Gus Williams hit the right field wall on the line for a double, the ball going over Brother Harry's head. The next inning Brother Harry slammed the ball for a double right alongside Brother Gus, just by way of repaying the compliment. The score:

Detroit Wins 1 to 0 Game.

DETROIT, June 12.—For the third time this season A. Rankin Johnson pitched in a game which ended 1 to 0, and for a second time he was defeated. He lost today to Detroit when Bush tripled in the first inning and scored on Moriarty's sacrifice fly which Scott caught in foul territory. Inability of Boston's heavy hitters to solve Coveleskie's delivery brought victory to Detroit. Coveleskie yielded two hits and Johnson five. Score:

CLEVELAND, Ohio, June 12.—The Naps were helpless against Wyckoff's pitching today and Philadelphia took the third game of the series, 6 to 1. Studebaker

ECONOMICAL LIGHT WEIGHT SIX

There is more car value in the Studebaker SIX than in any other "Six."

Because we manufacture a larger proportion of its parts than any other manufacturer produces for his car.

Every piece of steel used in it is made by a special Studebaker formula, and all parts are heat treated from two to four times during manufacture.

We actually create greater value in the Studebaker light-weight SIX'S parts than the makers of assembled "Sixes" can buy.

We can afford to embody highest quality in each of its parts because Studebaker builds 50,000 cars. Each car carries only one fifty-thousandth of the Studebaker overhead expense.

We are content with a smaller manufacturing profit per car, because our large production evens matters up.

Send for the Studebaker Proof Book, describing Studebaker manufacturing methods.

Resolute won by 2:49, (actual time,) and 6:02, (corrected time.)

Resolute, the flag officers' America's Cup candidate, made it a clean sweep by taking the third of the Sandy Hook trial races from Alexander Smith Cochran's yacht Vanitie yesterday.

Resolute went right out from the start and won a clean-cut victory, beating her bronze rival boat by 2 minutes and 49 seconds. With her time allowance thrown in, Resolute won by 6 minutes and 2 seconds. It was the soundest victory and treuncing of the series so far.

There will be no more racing for this pair of keen contenders for the honor of defending the America's Cup until June 23, when they will go at it again in a special match on the Sound off Greenwich for the Indian Harbor Yacht Club's prize. As the score now stands, Resolute has won five and Vanitie two out of seven starts. They broke even on the Sound.

It was not so much the manner in which Resolute won as the way Vanitie lost that upset all calculations yesterday. Over a triangular course of thirty miles, two-thirds of the way being a reach, the Cochran sloop had a rare opportunity thrust upon her, yet she made nothing of it. She sailed a sluggish and uninteresting race, trailing from first to last and putting forward none of the qualities that had hitherto made her a factor no matter how far astern.

The best she could do after dropping more than four minutes in the first leg to windward, was to pick up 14 second on the reach to the second mark and 59 seconds on the next reach home. Without detracting from Resolute's consistently superior showing, it must be said that Vanitie yesterday was little better than a poor imitation of her real self.

Vanitie's Crew Cheer Winner.

It was a hard race to lose, for it was the last trial the sloops will have over the international course, and much depended on it. When it was over, Vanitie's crew did a sportsmanlike thing. With the white-hulled winner just ahead, they lined the deck and gave three cheers for Resolute and her men. The winning crew returned this salute in kind.

Before the race started, Defiance, the tri-city syndicate's candidate, bade farewell to the cup course and, with her topmast lowered and her canvas stripped, proceeded under tow for City Island to undergo alterations to her rigging. The nature of these changes is not known, but the delay in getting ready is certain to prove a serious handicap in the races to come.

There was a good twelve-knot southwesterly breeze blowing when the Regatta Committee, H. de B. Parsons, Chairman; Frederick O. Spedden, and J. M. Macdonough, reached the starting line off Ambrose Channel Lightship on board C. K. G. Billings's yacht Vanadis an hour before the start. It was expected that a windward and leeward course would be chosen, following the cup race custom, but the committee sent up signals for a triangular race. The first leg of ten miles was to be a beat, south southwest one-half west, to a buoy off North Long Branch; the second a broad ten-mile reach east one-half north, and the third a close reach of ten miles northwest by north, back to the start.

The sea was choppy, and there were whitecaps as the wind began to freshen, and this meant fast going, with conditions in Vanitie's favor. Both yachts had left the Horseshoe early and were manoeuvring near the mark under full canvas when the preliminary whistle sounded at 10:45. Vanitie carried clubtopsail, staysail, and jib, with a jibtopsail set up in stops. Resolute had on a brand-new suit of canvas, just made for her at Ratsey's, and each sail fitted smugly. The only perceptible difference was a slightly larger roach or bulge in her mainsail. She wore her single headrig, with a jibtopsail up in stops.

They made for the line with plenty of time to spare, and opened the jockeying by cutting a large figure eight a short distance astern of the yacht Vanadis. When the 10:55 warning whistle blew Capt. Dennis had brought Vanitie up sharply on the starboard side of Vanadis, and Charles Francis Adams, 2d, Resolute's amateur helmsman, had swung his racer up on the port side of the yacht. Immediately Mr. Adams turned and swung around to leeward of the committee boat in pursuit of Capt. Dennis. He succeeded in making a short cut across Vanitie's bows while they were circling for the advantage, and, with Vanitie blanketed, Mr. Adams set out hotfoot for the line.

"Jockeying" at the Start.

Capt. Dennis stuck to him grimly, crowding in to leeward so close that it seemed as if the two frail hulls would bump. They seemed to be glued together. As they rushed for the line Capt. Dennis tried his mightiest to creep out from under Resolute's lee, but he could not budge. Mr. Adams had him neatly pocketed, and held him there, pushing Resolute over at 11:00:45. Vanitie was only three seconds later getting away. It was a wonderful start and a triumph of strategy for Mr. Adams.

They made away at great speed, close hauled and on the starboard tack, and breaking out their baby jibs as they flew. Capt. Dennis had to keep pinching his boat in order to stay where he was, but Vanitie was getting the back draught of Resolute's sails, and after four frantic minutes her skipper gave up the struggle. He eased off a trifle and came about on the port tack just astern of the flying Herreshoff creation. Skipper Adams went right after him and for a short while there was a fine bit of racing, both yachts heeling with their starboard rails down to the water and their crews flattened along the top of the deck. Resolute's new clubtopsail fluttered a little and so did Vanitie's, for both skippers were pinching their craft and pointing high. Fifteen minutes after the start, Capt. Dennis tricked Mr. Adams into coming about but as soon as he returned Mr. Adams went back at him and held to the same course.

Resolute was outfooting and outpointing the Cochran boat steadily, and the gap between them grew larger all the way to the Highlands shore. For a time Capt. Dennis had Vanitie's headsails filled out and she seamed to hold her ground more stubbornly, but as soon as the bronze yacht tried to point as high as the leader her jib would flutter and she fell back.

Mr. Adams stood in close to shore, but came about at the right time to save his wind. Capt. Dennis waited two minutes longer and on going over to the starboard tack he had to work his way through a streaky air to get out. This held Vanitie back and by noon Resolute had pulled into a quarter-mile lead and was well to windward. Vanitie's showing up to this point was about what was expected in a thrash to windward, and if she held on it was figured that she could make up her loss on the reaching legs.

Resolute Far in Lead.

Resolute made a short hitch to fetch the mark on the starboard tack, and she wore around it, breaking out her balooner and easing sheets to port for a broad reach to the second mark. Resolute's time at the first turn was 12:29:15. Vanitie's 12:33:10. It took them eight tacks to do the first leg and Resolute had a lead of 4 minutes and 4 seconds.

With the leader more than half a mile ahead and plowing along rapidly under her big balooner, everybody expected to see Vanitie flash by her looner and take up the chase in earnest. But no. Capt. Dennis selected his reaching jib to do the work, and with this much less effective kite the lookedfor chase never materialized. In Thursday's race, where the first ten-mile leg was a broad reach, Vanitie with her balloooner outdistanced Resolute 4 minutes and 29 seconds. Yesterday, under weather conditions that were very similar, she did no better than hold her rival by using her reaching jib.

Laying a course straight for the turn, Resolute rounded the mark still far in the lead at 1:24:20. Vanitie got there at 1:28:10. She had picked up only 14 seconds, leaving the flag officers' sloop with a lead of 3 minutes and 50 seconds.

The last leg was a close reach. Resolute doused her balloonor and broke out a reaching jib and single headsail, hauling sheets in. Mr. Adams figured he could get better results here with less sail.

Vanitie Picks Up on Resolute.

The reaching jib that failed to gain for Vanitie on the second leg now began to get in some good work, and with sheets closer hauled the Cochran sloop began to creep up. Both boats were going at a tremendous clip, but Vanitie appeared to be heeling more and getting the most out of her canvas. Half way home Vanitie had cut down the lead to such an extent that those at the finish were not sure that she would not pass the leader in the final dash. But looks were deceptive.

A slight change in the wind made the last two miles a broader reach, and Mr. Adams was the first to take advantage of it. He doused the reaching jib and put up a small balloonor. Capt. Dennis seeing this took the hint and this time flung out his balloonor. It helped, but all hope of overtaking the leader had long since vanished.

Resolute crossed at 2:23:57 and Vanitie at 2:26:46.

Both sloops quickly lowered sail and were towed by their tenders to the Horseshoe inside the Hook. They will leave there today and tow back to the Sound, stopping at City Island for an overhauling. Changes in the rigging are being considered by the owners and designers of each candidate, and it is quite possible that Resolute will appear in the next race with a double headrig.

BREEZE DESERTS SHAMROCKS.

Lipton's Two Yachts Out for a Spin, but Are Forced to Quit Early.

SOUTHAMPTON, England, June 12.—Sir Thomas Lipton's yacht Shamrock IV., accompanied by his Shamrock III., started in another race today, but owing to the light and fluky character of the wind the contest was an inconclusive one, and was abandoned before the course of fifteen miles had been finished.

The start was under the American sailing conditions, and the older boat had the better of it in securing both the lead and the windward berth. The challenger, however, soon passed Shamrock III., again demonstrating her superiority in windward work as long as the wind held fairly true.

After seventy minutes of sailing Shamrock IV. had established a lead of a mile. Then she ran into a calm patch and the older boat, holding the breeze, passed her and rounded the windward mark fourteen minutes in the lead. Shamrock IV. began picking up on the Shamrock III. on the run home and gradually was overhauling her when the breeze petered out and the contest was declared off.

Californians Win at Tennis.

HARTFORD, Conn., June 12.—Leland Stanford University's clever tennis players, R. L. Murray and R. L. Hahn, got all the glory in the final matches in the singles and doubles of the annual New England tennis tourney here today. The Californians were not called upon to play in top-notch form to win. In the championship match in the singles Murray defeated F. W. Cole of Hartford, 6—2, 6—1, 6—2. Murray will play Alrick H. Man, Jr., of Richmond Hill, L. I., the former Yale star, in the challenge round tomorrow. In the doubles Murray and Hahn defeated J. A. Richards of Wesleyan and G. C. Burgwin of Trinity, 6—1, 7—5, 6—1. Murray and Richards both did stellar work in all the sets.

McLaughlin and Cady in Final.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 12.—M. A. McLaughlin of Denver and John Deere Cady of Rock Island, Ill., will compete tomorrow for the transmissippi golf championship. McLaughlin won from S. M. Edmunds of St. Louis, 6 up and 5 to play, and Cady defeated M. P. Morris of Kansas City, 7 up and 5 to play in the semi-finals today.

AD. ATHLETES WIN PRIZES BY HUNDREDS

Friends of Club Send Enough Samples to Give Even Non-Contestants a Share.

BIG SILVER CUP FOR GOLFER

Loser of Fat Men's Race Rewarded Because He Would Have Won Twenty Years Ago.

One hundred members of the Representatives' Club, an organization composed of magazine advertising men, took 100 prizes in a series of athletic contests they held on their annual outing yesterday afternoon and evening at the Crescent Athletic Club, Bay Ridge.

Among the contests were a tennis series, golf, baseball, fat men's races, and a three-legged race for grandfathers. For several weeks members have been concentrating their wiles in convincing manufacturers of goods, varying from collar buttons to silver cups, that no better method of introducing their products than by offering samples as prizes for yesterday's contests could be found, and as a consequence the table in the band stand, between the baseball and the tennis grounds, was littered with such a variety of prizes that there were some for even those members who took no part in the contests.

The prize which attracted most attention was a huge silver cup, donated by Converse D. Marsh of the Bates Advertising Company, on which the winner of the golf tournament each year wins a leg. It will finally become the property of the first player who wins twice in succession.

A smaller replica of the same cup was presented outright to Hal R. Reed, advertising manager of The Christian Herald, who won yesterday's tournament. Nine other golf prizes were distributed among the ten participants in the tournament.

Another handsome silver cup, to be won under the same conditions at tennis, was donated by W. F. Young. H. W. H. Powel, who was among a long list of winning athletes from the advertising department of Vogue, won the first leg on this cup and got, in addition, a set of Kipling.

There was much speculation early in the afternoon as to what contest Donald McFadyen could most suitably enter. Mr. McFadyen weighs 245 pounds and graduated from Princeton in 1910. In the three years prior to graduation he played centre and guard on the Princeton football team. He represented the advertising department of Mothers' Magazine, but was not interested in tennis, golf, or baseball. A tenpin ball was found for him eventually, and he broke all previous records on Mothers' Magazine for putting the shot with it. His prize was a wrist watch. Nigel Cholmeley-Jones of McClure's won another wrist watch as ninth prize in the tennis tournament.

After considerable delay in finding two members who would consent to umpire, the baseball game was started in time to finish five innings before sundown. Larry Weaver of Harpers and Archie Hyde of Christian Work agreed to umpire after filling their pockets with court plaster, borrowed from the stock of prizes. One team was composed of members of the advertising departments of woman's magazines. Its members wore middy blouses. The other team was known as the "Olus Tallenders," and although the programme bore the slogan, "What good are they?" before their names, they beat the Middies 4 to 1. They wore as costumes the new shirt-leg shirts.

Howard Ruggles of System, who was once a semi-professional ball player in Chicago, was captain of the winning team, and won as his prize a gold safety razor. The other members of the team received sets of books, shaving cups, suspenders, boxes of bon bons, and cigarette holders. The losers grumbled a little about "rubbing it in" when they found the rest of the liquid court plaster among their trophies.

Harry Porter, Vice President of the Frasbrey Advertising Agency, got up a fat men's race, but was beaten by George O. Pritchard, advertising agent, for a series of religious publications, who received as a prize a belt several sizes too small. Mr. Porter won three intercollegiate 100-yard dashes while attending the University of Michigan. Had yesterday's race been held twenty years ago, he declared, he would have won it easily. On this ground, when called upon to distribute the prizes, he awarded himself a handsome cigarette holder.

The athletic events were followed by a banquet in the clubhouse, after which the men returned to New York on the Observation, a boat they had chartered for the occasion. They took back with them as souvenirs copies of an 18-page programme for the outing, gotten up by Francis Lawton, Jr., of McClure's, Sam Smart of House and Garden, and several other members, for the front cover, of which James Montgomery Flagg drew his conception of the advertising manager's task. The picture represented a helpless business man at his desk with his check book near him, being strangled by an advertising man in whose hand, as a final argument, is a huge spiked club. Some of those present objected to the picture on the ground that it reminded them of their daily work and spoiled the day.

QUIMET CLOSE TO LEADERS.

American Only Four Strokes Behind Ray and Taylor in British Open Golf

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

TROON, Scotland, June 12.—Francis Ouimet, the American open golf champion, with another round of 77, qualified easily for the British open championship, his aggregate score of 154 being only four more than that of Edward Ray and J. H. Taylor, who head the list with 150 each, Janus, Braid, and Duncan 151 each, and Harry Vardon 152. All the favorites qualified except Edward Blackwell. Ouimet's score is three strokes better than the next best amateur. Ouimet certainly is playing finer golf than he has exhibited yet on this side, and made quite an impression on those who followed him. Harold Weber, who failed to qualify, took eighty-seven strokes, putting very badly.

The sensation of the day was provided by the sudden appearance at Troon this morning of J. J. McDermott, who was twenty-four hours too late for the qualifying competition. He had missed by eight minutes the boat from Havre to Southampton.

MISS BROWN AND SISTER WIN

Capture Women's National Tennis Doubles Second Time.

PHILADELPHIA, June 12.—For the second consecutive year Miss Mary Browne and her sister, Mrs. Robert Williams of California, won the women's doubles championship of the United States by defeating Mrs. Edward Raymond of New York and Miss Edna Wildey of Orange, N. J., in the final match of that section of the women's national lawn tennis tournament, played today on the courts of the Philadelphia Cricket Club. The score was 8-6, 6-2. This makes the third consecutive time that Miss Browne has had a share in winning this title, for paired with Miss Dorothy Green of Philadelphia she won that title at the annual tournament in 1912.

Miss Marie Wagner of New York, the national indoor champion, will play Miss Browne, the title holder, in the challenge round tomorrow for the woman's individual championship. Miss Wagner defeated Miss Claire Cassel, also of New York, in the final match today 6-1, 7-5.

SHAFER'S TRIPLE VICTORY.

Seventh Regiment Tennis Player Plays Strong Game on Englewood Courts.

George C. Shafer played the leading role in the New Jersey State tennis championships yesterday on the courts of the Englewood Field Club at Englewood, N. J., when he won two matches in the singles and one in the doubles. In the tournament for the singles title Shafer disposed of Harold Throckmorton, the Princeton interscholastic champion, in the fourth round, and later in the semi-final round won from Louis Graves. By his second victory Shafer qualified to play S. Howard Voshell today in the final round for the championship.

In the doubles Shafer, with Wylie C. Grant as a partner, found Throckmorton and L. Dunham a difficult proposition. It was a closely contested three-set match and at the end the winners did not show any great advantage over the defeated pair. Shafer and Grant will play Gordon and Fraser-Campbell in the semi-final round, and the winners will face Voshell and Frederick Boggs for the title. Should Shafer and Grant win the semi-final they will play Voshell and Boggs in the final round. This will give Shafer three more games today. The summary:

New Jersey State Championship, Men's Singles.—Fourth Round—George C. Shafer defeated Harold Throckmorton, 6—3, 6—1. Semi-Final Round—George C. Shafer defeated Louis Graves, 1—3, 6—2, 6—4.

New Jersey State Championship, Third Round—G. C. Shafer and Wylie C. Grant defeated L. Dunham and Harold Throckmorton, 6—3, 8—6, 6—3. A. Gordon and A. Fraser-Campbell defeated Ralph McK. Glasebrook and B. Kirkland, 6—4, 6—3, 6—3.

Semi-Final Round—S. Howard Voshell and Frederick C. Boggs defeated H. Terrence and M. Hamilton, 3—6, 6—3, 6—3.

Consolation Singles.—First Round—B. W. Stair defeated T. G. Garett by default; W. S. Slade defeated Ely Behar, 6—2, 7—5, 6—3; J. R. Randolph defeated H. N. Balch by default; Frederick C. Boggs defeated F. Hardcastle, 6—2, 6—0; G. French defeated E. F. Thomas by default; A. Fraser-Campbell defeated E. J. Baldwin, 6—3, 6—2.

Second Round—B. W. Stair defeated W. S. Slade by default; Frederick C. Boggs defeated J. H. Randolph, 6—1, 6—3; A. Fraser-Campbell defeated G. French by default.

FAVORITES COME THROUGH IN GOLF

Marston, Downey, Van Vleck, and Kammer Win in First Division at Fox Hills.

Although hard pressed to win, favorites came through the first and second match rounds in the annual invitation golf tournament of the Fox Hills Golf Club yesterday. In fact, close matches were the rule all day. The semi-final this morning, as the result of the day's play, will bring together Max R. Marston of Baltusrol, and Harold L. Downey of Apawamis, in the upper part of the bracket, while in the lower half Charles E. Van Vleck, Jr., of Baltusrol, the medal winner, will clash with August F. Kammer of Fox Hills, runner-up in the metropolitan amateur championship last year.

Both Marston and Van Vleck found themselves confronted with a task. Kammer, however, had little difficulty in advancing. Van Vleck found it necessary to go to the nineteenth hole with E. G. B. Riley of Fox Hills, who when five down and five to play, won all of the remaining holes in fine style and squared the match. An extra putt on the nineteenth cost him the match. In the afternoon Van Vleck took the measure of Gordon Yule of Yale, by 2 up and 1 to play.

Marston's first opponent was E. B. Prindle of Cornell, and the former interscholastic champion won by a 2 and 1 margin. In the second round, however, he met Morton L. Fearey of Richmond County. Marston found himself down at the turn and by the time the fifteenth was reached he was still two holes behind. Winning the sixteenth and seventeenth squared the match and a halve on the home hole made the extra hole necessary. Fearey drove into the rough and his third overran the cup. Marston's second reached home and a deadly approach putt settled the match in his favor. Thesummary:

First Sixteen.—First Round—Morton L. Feary, Richmond County, beat Percy W. Kendall, Deal, 1 up; Maxwell R. Marston, Baltusrol, beat E. B. Prindle, Cornell, 2 and 1; Harold L. Allen, Fox Hills, beat Samuel Allison, Midland, 4 and 3; H. L. Wyatt, Fox Hills, beat G. B. Adams, National, 2 and 1.

Second Round.—Farley beat Travis, 1 up; Wheeler beat Janin, 4 and 2; Beach beat Van Loan, 6 and 5; Allen beat Wyatt, 3 and 2.

Third Sixteen.—First Round—Frank Allaire, Fox Hills, beat E. Maurer Posey, Fox Hills, 1 up; J. Elmer O'Donohue, Fox Hills, beat H. H. McClellan, Fox Hills, 4 and 3; F. V. Sullivan, Fox Hills, beat Vaughan C. Spaulding, Yale, 2 and 1; Stanley F. Gifford, Fox Hills, beat H. F. Ives, Fox Hills, 4 and 3; A. S. Andrews, Flushing, beat C. R. MacInnes, Princeton, 1 up; T. F. COLOMBIA'S TREATY.

Now that the Tolls Repeal bill is out of the way, the Senate will have time to consider the treaty with Colombia, which has been ratified, as might have been expected, by the South American State, but certainly will not be accepted by the Senate in its present form. Without an authentic translation of the clause which has been construed as an apology to Colombia by the United States it is well to reserve judgment as to the extent of the changes that must be made in that part of the treaty.

A formal apology is certainly uncalled for. The Colombians were doing all they could to prevent the construction of the canal. Like King CANUTE and Mother Partington, they were trying to sweep back the waves of the ocean. Sensitive Americans have not liked the way in which the Colombians were outwitted, but there is not an American citizen living worthy of the name who is not proud of our building of the canal. Indemnity is due to Colombia, but the proposed $25,000,000 is a preposterously large sum, and it should be greatly reduced. Colombia is to have privileges in relation to the canal possessed by no other nation, and there is probably no objection to that. The treaty has commendable features. But no apology is needed and the indemnity should be reasonable.

President WILSON goes to attend his class reunion at Princeton today with the understanding that no formal notice be taken of his visit; that he is to spend the day as an ordinary member of the class of '79, to lunch with his classmates, march in the alumni parade, and sit with the class at the ball game. If Princeton wishes to please him it will take him faithfully at his word. It is strange that this side of his interesting personality is still unknown to many of his fellow-citizens. Rightly understood, it supplies the key to much in his career that mystifies. It is due to an inherent, lifelong preference for simple things and plainness. It is a complementary side of the same characteristic which makes his political methods so direct. In it lies the secret of his power.

The man who is happiest in old clothes and hates a silk hat is the same man who meets a suspicious Congressman and conquers him, not by threats or sagacity, but by telling him with frank simplicity what he thinks ought to be done. He is the same man who upsets the precedents of a century by going to Congress to deliver his message and instantly disarms those who thought it savored of royalty by introducing himself as "a human being." Sometimes this simplicity of method brings defeat upon him, but the balance is large in his favor. It is nonsense to say that he gets his astonishing results by patronage or threats; his way of getting them is by being himself, the only way he knows. The New Jersey politicians, always expecting to find a politician "playing the game," and always looking for the vulnerable spot in his play, found themselves baffled and conquered by such a Governor, and their representatives in Washington have had the same experience with such a President. He does not adopt this method as tactics, he acts in this way because this way is WILSON, the man himself. He knows no other way. "I cannot make myself over; you must take me as you find me," he said once.

Often this simplicity and plainness, and this inability to make himself over, leads to mortifying rebuffs and to painful misunderstanding, for the defect of the quality is that he cannot forecast the way his acts will seem through the eyes of others. Disliking fuss and wishing to attend strictly to business, he declined, without even thinking about it, an election to the Chevy Chase Country Club, and was amazed to find he had committed a mortal sin. Since the inaugural ball wasted the public money to gratify the love of the American citizen for showing his clothes and getting his name in the papers, he simply cut it off and created heartburnings. But, in the long run, how amazing has been his march, and what results has he got by the simple life in politics! If he is hard to understand, it is because the plainest fact is sometimes the hardest to grasp. Men who are looking for the underlying motive are most easily deceived by having the truth told them; it is the only thing they will not believe.

TRIALS OF THE YACHTS.

Vanitie hangs on to Resolute's taffrail like a puppy to a root. Once or twice Vanitie has shown Resolute the way, but not by enough to save her time. Resolute's performance is so consistent when there is the air worthy of a racer's silk that the presumption in her favor is all but conclusive. The case is stronger than this, and gives a line regarding the cup races themselves. We get a line on Shamrock IV. only through her beating her predecessor, which took its beating here. But Resolute has surpassed not only a boat good enough to beat Shamrock III., or even possibly Shamrock IV., but the best time any of the Shamrocks ever made over the cup course in a like race. Conditions of wind and weather may so differ that there is a poor comparison afforded between any two performances, but when the comparison is between a new racer and the best times on record the inequalities of conditions cancel themselves out. It would seem that we may prepare to cheer for Resolute, unless she goes lame, or her skipper turns blind. Even then Vanitie might do the trick, for there is no sign there ever was a better seventy-five-footer, bar one.

It is this very week that their British Majesties saw the Russian military jumpers win the King Edward Cup from all the world for the third time. Accordingly London will see the cup no more, for the third winning makes it the property of the winners. This is the fourth Shamrock race, and the end is not in sight. The gallant knight says it is the last because the four-leaved Shamrock is his mascot, and the Victory saluted on the Queen's birthday, when his challenger was launched. Assuming that he wins, who would defend the cup on behalf of England, and against what American challengers? Looking back over the history of the cup, thinking of the good boat which won it in the first place, and of the freaks which have kept what the good boat won, it cannot be said that the later races have done anything to improve the type of marine racer.

The deed of trust has done wonders by way of keeping the cup, but nothing to develop boats fit to go to sea or to carry either passengers or cargo in comfort or safety. The builders of freaks have gone perhaps to the limit of designers' ingenuity and strength of materials, and close to the limit of interest in the one-sided contests. If there are to be other races, would it not be well that they should be under other conditions, more nearly approaching the conditions of either sport or utility?

WHY HAVE CORONERS?

What good is a Coroner? This frequently recurring question is again justified by the news that a wound has been found in the skull of ELLA WINTER, the Baltimore girl whose body was found in Curtis Bay a week ago last Thursday. The Coroner's inquest had dismissed the case with a verdict of death by drowning.

Whether the girl was murdered or not, the circumstances of her death were such as to call for careful investigation. The Coroner's notion of such an investigation seems to have been characteristic of his tribe. Was she found in the water? Yes. Very well, then she was drowned. At some time, perhaps, we shall become sensible enough to abolish an office which once served a useful purpose but has become an anachronism.

DANCING AND MANNERS.

Nobody has yet been at pains to estimate how far the revival of the dance as a social diversion has improved contemporary manners, and especially American manners. We know that our manners are still susceptible of improvement, of course, but the proletariat cannot have failed to acquire some sort of superficial refinement from the example of the formal masters of ceremony in the new dance halls and the authentic deportment of the instructors, whom all must have who would keep in the dance and follow the changing steps.

The dance of today is a continued story with fresh interest in every installment. Already the most essential features of the earlier phases of the revival are doomed. The one-step and the lame duck belong to the past. Last Summer that was the best dancer who went all around the ballroom without taking a foot off the floor. This Summer the canter will modify the lately fashionable dance, the wave will succeed the dip. Dancing masters are prophesying a revival of the minuet. With that will come inevitably knee breeches for the men, shoe buckles, ruffled shirt fronts perhaps.

Is all right with the world? Are we all degenerating, or are we merely going around in a circle, according to our destinies? Probably there is no cause for apprehension, especially as there is nothing the wisest of us can do in the way of averting moral and social calamity, if they are really threatened, except to put his own house in order.

A CITY COLLEGE PRESIDENT.

Almost a year has elapsed since Dr. FINLEY resigned the Presidency of City College to become State Commissioner of Education. The search of the Board of Trustees for his successor has finally narrowed down to one or two candidates, and it is expected that their choice will soon be announced.

The filling of this position is important public business. During the last decade the history of City College has been one of remarkable growth and expansion. Dr. FINLEY left the institution bigger, better and more efficient than when he became its head. But he left also a heritage of new policies and unfinished programmes which his successor must carry to conclusion. The new President should be a man thoroughly familiar with the work of the college and the needs of its complex student body. He should be, too, an experienced educator. The adjustment of the conflict between the strictly classical education and the new demand for commercial and industrial training, the correlation of the various parts of the city's educational system, the establishment of closer relations between the City College and the departments of the City Government—these are essentially problems for the broad-minded expert.

MORTALITY OF SCHOOLING.

Out of 86,000 pupils entered in the elementary public schools in one year but 48,000 survive to the eighth year; of the 41,000 that qualify for high school only 23,000 actually enter and but 4,097 stick it through to graduation. That, Mayor MITCHEL said in his address at New York University, represents the proportion of "mortality" in the schooling of 661,000 students.

What becomes of the vast number that drop out? They must go into industries while they are not even apprentices, not trained at all for their special vocations. For this reason the Mayor of the greatest industrial city in America has visited the industrial schools of the Middle West, especially those of Cincinnati, Gary, and Chicago, to observe models for the system of vocational training here.

The Board of Associate Superintendents has no member qualified to supervise the proposed extension of New York's industrial schools. The plant now represents an investment of $6,000,000, with a yearly expenditure of hundreds of thousands. A vacancy among the Superintendents exists, and it is soon to be filled. Mr. MITCHEL and Mr. CHURCHILL have seen the work of the Western vocational experts, they have invited some of them to make a study of the situation in this city. Perhaps they can suggest a fit candidate among them to take permanent charge of a system that must be made of the highest value to the industrial and commercial welfare of New York.

WILD WOMEN'S WAYS.

In spite of Home Secretary MCKENNA'S faith in the efficacy of the cat and mouse act, each day has its own record of fresh outrages by the wild women of England who are advertising but not helping the suffrage cause. Everybody knows, the world over, that a certain proportion of Englishwomen want the right to vote; how large a proportion has never been determined. The militants have advertised their cause well, but there is not at present the slightest encouragement for them in the course of events. You cannot worry an Englishman into doing anything. Who should know that better than an Englishwoman?

Advertising their cause they assuredly are, these fanatical harridans, and the Home Secretary will never induce the newspapers of England, or of any other country, to stop printing the news about them. But in more ways than one they are also hurting their cause. They have made woman suffrage a stench in the nostrils of decent persons, and they have also opened a way to other criminals to make capital out of their trade mark. A few placards inscribed "Votes for Women" lying around the ruins of a burned building will hereafter fasten the crime of arson on the suffragettes, even if robbery and murder are associated with it. Smashed window panes will be charged to the woman suffrage account, even if articles displayed behind them have been stolen. There is the disadvantage of this kind of advertising.

CITY PLAYGROUNDS.

Mr. MCANENY did well to point out at the Recreation Alliance Conference on Thursday the need of centralized control of the city's play spaces. New York has a Public Recreation Commission, but its powers are chiefly advisory. The actual management of the public playgrounds is divided among many departments of the City Government, each working independently within its own sphere. The park playgrounds are controlled by the Park Commissioner, the vacation playgrounds and recreation centres by the Board of Education, the recreation piers by the Dock Department, the public baths and swimming pools by the Borough Presidents, and the bridge approaches and promenades by the Bridge Department. In the immediate vicinity of Hudson Park, for example, there are eight recreation facilities under as many different jurisdictions.

The concentration of authority in the hands of a single administrative commission would save much duplication of work and money. Clearly, this should be the first step in solving the city's recreation problem.

MUSIC AS A HEARTENER.

Like the scaling of Gibraltar is the ordeal of examinations to hundreds of thousands in the secondary schools and colleges. As martial airs encourage the military, organ recitals now put heart into the men who go up to their examinations at Harvard. Organist DAVISON of that university's division of music, finds that marches, scherzos, an occasional fugue, and, of course, HANDEL'S Largo played in Appleton Chapel on the mornings during the final examination period put spurs to the spirits and nerve them for the trial.

Mr. DAVISON did not ask the psychologists whether his scheme was scientific, but applied it directly to the students. They say it works splendidly. We hear it has prevented nervous prostrations at Wellesley. If the plan works, why consult the psychologists?

Books for Summer reading to suit all tastes will be found in the annotated list of 100 new publications which is the main feature of the Summer Number of THE NEW YORK TIMES REVIEW OF BOOKS, to be published tomorrow. Each book is described briefly. Besides this invaluable list the Summer Book Number has special features of uncommon interest, and these, too, will appeal directly to any one who is beginning to think of providing himself with good reading for the vacation season.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Familiar Reasons Controlled.

Possibly THOMAS J. MCCORMICK will prove to be the best Warden Sing Sing Prison ever had. As he has built up a big steamfitting and plumbing business in Yonkers, he must have a good deal of the business ability which the management of a great prison considered as a manufacturing plant and as a hotel certainly requires. As he has gained and held for years a prominent position among the Democratic politicians of Westchester County it can fairly be assumed that he is both tactful and forceful in dealing with large bodies of men.

These, however, are qualifications which have been possessed to a greater or less degree by the previous Wardens, and we know only too well from recent investigations what Sing Sing has been and still is. They were not particularly to blame for the fact that the buildings are but little better adapted for their purpose than a mediaeval dungeon, or at any rate have served practically no other purposes than those served by mediaeval dungeons. Presumably the Wardens have all done about as well as they could in the circumstances, but among the factors of the situation was the fact that few if any of them saw any reason for changing the whole conduct of the prison and making it something more and better than a place of detention, punitive certainly, and deterrent theoretically.

It is to be hoped, but not to be expected, that Mr. MCCORMICK realizes the existence in the world today of a movement for the treatment of convicts in a new way, with a view to the restoration of some to useful citizenship and the utilization in permanent confinement to their own and the public advantage of such capacities as the others possess. The people who believe in doing this call themselves, in self-conscious moments, penologists, and in several of our States they have proved that penology is a real science, dealing, not with a special variety of human beings, but with men and women much like the rest of us in being the products of heredity and environment.

It were desirable that Sing Sing should have a Warden with known talents not confined to steamfitting and county politics. It is rather discouraging to learn that Sing Sing is not to have one.

No Ocean Traveler Imperiled.

Many who speak their first thoughts will probably express surprise and regret that such full publication should have been made of the attempt to extort money from the Cunard Company by threats to blow up one of its ships. The story as told, of course, will excite apprehensions in the minds of many timid voyagers, and perhaps it will prevent a few from voyaging at all.

No careful reader of the tale, however, can fail to see that the man was a blackmailer, not a dynamiter—that he had made no preparations for carrying his menaces into execution and had not even thought of doing so. Nobody would have been endangered had he been utterly ignored by the company and the police, and the only "lesson" of the affair, its only warning, is that anybody who undertakes a like enterprise is pretty sure to land promptly in jail.

That is about the beginning and the end of the "suggestion" which publicity in this instance has conveyed to other criminals.

The counter-plot of the police was adroit and deserved the complete success it achieved. Perhaps the most significant fact in the case is that the blackmailer is a graduate of the Elmira Reformatory. The form his enterprise took shows how well that institution earns its name.

An Open Road to Fame.

With something of humiliation a good many people who read the newspapers and an occasional book are confessing that they never heard of Dr. HAMILTON RICE until he turned up in Spain with laboriously frank assertions that the Colonel's new river is an old one.

Dr. RICE, it seems, knew that river long since as the Matuara, and he insists that one explorer, meaning himself, is permitted to question the intelligence and the honesty of another.

Well, he is. Also he is permitted to bring himself, by so doing, into the illuminated circle of which the Colonel is always the mathematical centre. Whoever does that is sure, while he shares the light, of commanding attention of one sort or another for anything he says.

This fact may go some distance toward explaining why that circle is always so crowded. The name of Dr. HAMILTON RICE is now familiar to no small fraction of the world's population, and known, too, if not as that of a great explorer, at least as that of a brave man, ready to take chances.

DR. MacCRACKEN PROTESTS.

Says Presbytery Meeting Report Was Exaggerated.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Upon Monday last the Presbytery of New York, whose Moderator I am the present year, adopted the report of a committee presented by the Chairman, Dr. George Alexander. It also permitted the only person who voted against the report, Dr. John Fox, to file his ground of objection. The incident excited no discussion and occupied hardly fifteen minutes. (The thermometer stood at near 90 degrees.)

Out of this incident, occurring so quietly, a reporter built up a sensational article, which has been widely published in leading papers. I counted no less than six false statements of this reporter in my paper of Tuesday in about twice that number of sentences. Other papers, I have learned, excelled this paper in the sensational lying of their headlines respecting "Presbytery Torn by Heresy Charges." I have written the Moderators' Council, asking whether we must not revive the rule of the Presbytery of late optimistically suspended, which barred out irresponsible reporters and provided truthful reports. The chief reason for this is that Presbytery ought to prevent injurious libels in the shape of charges of heresy made by perhaps a single individual to be printed so as to wound and injure before the public young men who have been indorsed by a practically unanimous tribunal as well entitled to ordination.

A word as to the theology underlying this whole business. An ancient difference exists, and will always exist, between an extreme literal method of reading Scripture and a genuine understanding of the same. May I illustrate? Should the Presbytery of New York arraign the reporter who wrote this libel and convict him of lying, the literal reader of the Bible could quote the Book of Revelation, "All liars shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone," and could logically insist on this exact doom for the convicted reporter. Just so the literalist who forms his own decided notion of how Moses "saw God" would ask the Presbytery of New York to condemn as heretical the student who doubts whether Moses saw God in a literal way. The Presbytery of New York is today less concerned with such questions than we are in finding ways to win young men to the company of the pure in heart, to whom the promise is made, without any mention of either optical or psychological details, "They shall see God."

THE PANAMA OFFICERS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Though every one is proud of the work done by the army officers at Panama, it is not fair to reward them at the expense of their brother officers who have not had sufficient influence to be selected for the work. The present bill before Congress proposes to give the Panama officers extra rank, jumping them over the heads of those who have done equally meritorious work in the army but who have not been so largely advertised.

The officers detailed to Panama duty have all received much extra pay for years, while comrades who remained with the troops have been compelled to do extra amounts of the dangerous and disagreeable service in the Philippines with the mere 10 per cent. increase for foreign service, and many have lost health or life because they were taking the service which should have been done by those in Panama. It is now proposed to give them still more money, but just provision would cause the Panama officers to refund to the Treasury the extra compensation they have received over and above what has been given to men of equal rank on duty with troops at the same spot. The whole thing smacks of a raid on the Treasury.

Is it not about time also to check the hysterical praise showered on all those who have worked on the canal? The plans were all worked out and in running order before the army took control. One chief engineer after another got sick and quit, but the work went on the same. Equally good sanitation was done in hundreds of other places where the army has camped in the last fifteen years, but none of it has been written up in the magazines. The extravagant praise showered on the doctors serving in Panama, many of whom did hospital work differing in no respect from that in every other hospital, has thus created a widespread idea that something extraordinary was done in Panama—something deserving of tremendous rewards—and that all the rest of the army has been negligent of duty in some way, though accomplishing the same results in preventing disease.

The bill to jump the Panama officers over the heads of those who may have been doing more remarkable things in faraway swamps ought to be killed, as it is vicious in principle and its effects will be destructive of the esprit of the army. The officers with troops have never begrudged the favors showered on the Panama coterie, but now that the former are to be injured for devotion to their military profession, they will have a very material grievance under which efficiency is impossible.

Sanitation in New York.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

We have heard much about the sanitary condition of Vera Cruz, about the effect of American occupation, and how even the vultures have since been obliged to desert that spotless city. Yet in New York, at Fourth Avenue and Eleventh Street, a dead cat has been lying for two days, exposed to the sun. During that time traffic has decapitated it and it has become a feeding place for countless flies. The "quick lunch" counters near by, with their unprotected food supplies, will doubtless be the next attraction for these same scavengers.

How can we boast of the splendid sanitary arrangements we have installed in foreign cities when here in New York City we maintain such disgusting exhibitions of municipal neglect and carelessness?

Amsterdam Avenue Surface Cars.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

This morning, on the Amsterdam Avenue car, it took exactly seventeen minutes from Ninth Avenue and Fifty-third Street to Sixth Avenue and Fiftieth Street owing to the repairs that are being made in Fifty-third Street. Is there any reason why the cars could not be run through Fifty-ninth Street during this time?

"Teloida."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Why should not Dr. Low's recent invention be called "teloida"? The derivation would then be entirely Greek and the meaning most appropriate, "I have seen afar." "Oida" is the second perfect tense of the Greek verb which means "to see."

WOMEN'S POLITICAL VIEWS.

To Discuss Them Would Confuse the Important Issue of Suffrage.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you permit me to reply to the complaint of Silas Tuttle that suffragists do not discuss such questions as the tariff, the Mexican situation, or the political condition of city, State, or nation?

It is a matter of satisfaction to me to find that a reader of THE TIMES has discovered that we do not discuss these topics which Mr. Tuttle sets forth for our consideration. We avoid the discussion of such topics intentionally, but it does not follow that we have not opinions and even very decided views in regard to them.

We are a body of women who are pushing forward one of the most difficult of reforms. We have to weigh at each point just what questions will and what will not interfere with the advance of our cause. In the final settlement of the question of woman suffrage we have to make an appeal to every individual voter in the State. Our work is to try to win the individual man to cast a vote in favor of woman suffrage at a given election. Now, we happen to know that there are many men of many minds, and that if we are to win their votes for suffrage we must not run the risk of alienating their good opinion on other subjects. Some men are in favor of a low tariff, but all men are not in favor of a low tariff. Some men approve of President Wilson's Mexican policy, but all men do not approve of it. If we begin to give our views about Mexico and about the tariff then we should offend some men, because whatever our view, it would not be universally accepted as sound by the whole voting body of men.

I can assure Mr. Tuttle that it is not easy, when one has strong political views, to play the part of an oyster, and it only becomes possible to remain silent when one considers the importance of the question of the enfranchisement of women, and how small one's personal opinion about the tariff is as compared with the magnitude of the political emancipation of one-half the population of the State.

We are silent, not from paucity of thought, but from devotion to the interests of one great idea.

THE FLAG IN 1814.

Had 15 Stars and 15 Stripes When National Anthem Was Written.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Referring to the article in last Sunday's TIMES in regard to the centenary of "The Star-Spangled Banner," the writer of the article has made a slip of the pen in referring to "the original flag with its 18 stars." The picture which you show displays 13 stars and 15 stripes, which is the correct representation of the official United States Flag at that time, (1814.) The stars are arranged in five rows of three stars each so spaced that the stars of one row are opposite the spaces in the adjacent row. The flag of 15 stars and stripes was established by act of Congress approved by President Washington Jan. 13, 1794. That was the official flag until 1818.

On April 4, 1818, Congress enacted that from and after July 4, 1818, the flag should consist of thirteen stripes and twenty stars and that a star should be added for each new State. Tennessee, Ohio, and Louisiana were admitted to the Union after the act of 1794 and before the writing of "The Star-Spangled Banner," but while they were entitled to stars in the flag Congress made no change in the flag until 1818, as above stated, and the flag on Fort McHenry which was fired on, contained 15 stars and 15 stripes. As, prior to 1818, the United States Flag contained the same number of stars as it had stripes, there can be no mistake about the number of stars in the flag represented in the Sunday TIMES, which contains 15 stripes. Nicknames for the Flag.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Don't you think it advisable with the approach of Flag Day to discountenance the growing habit of applying nicknames to the flag? The flag is the flag. It is not "Old Glory," "The Old Rag," or anything but the flag.

The average individual who would show lack of reverence for it by applying a nickname to it would be just as prone to apply a nickname to the Deity.

Nor should the flag be recognized or permitted as an article of personal adornment any more than "The Star-Spangled Banner" should be played with variations or as a medley. HUGH HASTINGS.

When Trolley Cars Were Predicted.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your correspondent, William H. Hale, writing of "Skeptical Scientists" in THE TIMES recently, relates an incident in which a speaker at one of the long-ago meetings of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education, rather timidly advanced the idea that cars might some day be propelled by electricity. Mr. Hale states that the proposition was favorably received by the society, but that his report of the proposal was deemed too chimerical by the editor of The Railroad Gazette, who blue-pencilled it.

Your correspondent is evidently mistaken as to the society to which he refers, and perhaps also as to the name of the publication.

The Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education was established during the Summer of 1893 as an outcome of the World's Engineering Congress, which was held in Chicago during the World's Columbian Exposition. Doubtless all of the members who attended that congress and took part in the organization of the society referred to were and had been for some years thoroughly familiar with trolley cars, which at that time had become quite extensively used in many cities.

Mr. Hale has evidently mixed his "copy."

A COOLNESS BETWEEN THEM.

A coolness came between us at a moment's space;
We—who had sworn so lately our eternal love,
Calling, as lovers will, upon the stars above
To witness vows—observed it, face to face.
I felt its coming, aye, mayhap some act
Or word of mine made consummation speed;
'Twere wise to own it, for what woman need
To be coerced, when, for an honest fact,
She much desired it—hoped that it might be,
For reasons all important, so it seemed.
The night was sultry—almost roasted, we,
And of immediate relief both of us dreamed.
And so the coolness came just as I state.
He ordered peach ice cream, I chocolate!

LINCOLN'S TASK HARDEST.

Eulogies Delivered at Grave of the Martyred President's Mother.

LINCOLN CITY, Ind., June 12.—At the grave of his mother, Abraham Lincoln was eulogized by a former Vice President of the United States and three former Governors during the pilgrimage today of the Indiana Republican Editorial Association to this place. The grave of Nancy Hanks Lincoln and the old Lincoln home are now included in a State Park.

Augustus E. Willson, ex-Governor of Kentucky, addressed the editors and their friends on behalf of the State of Lincoln's nativity; W. T. Durbin, ex-Governor of Indiana, on behalf of the State of Lincoln's boyhood; Richard Yates, ex-Governor of Illinois, on behalf of the State of Lincoln's final adoption, and Charles W. Fairbanks, ex-Vice President, on behalf of the nation.

"In these days of hysteria and of the reckless impeachment of our political institutions, in these days of anxiety for the future," said Mr. Fairbanks, "it is well to recall the unwearying patience, the sublime faith, and the loyalty of Abraham Lincoln to the cause of the Union, his confidence in the virtue of republican government, and his trust in the ultimate judgment of the American people."

"Mr. Lincoln was beset by more and graver questions than ever taxed his illustrious predecessors or his great successors, but he never lost control of his better judgment; he never compromised with expediency, nor even for one moment bartered sound principles for the hope of political preferment."

NEW PEACE TREATIES READY

Those with England and France to be Signed on the Same Day.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Secretary Bryan, for the United States, and Ambassadors Jusserand and Spring-Rice, for France and Great Britain, will soon sign on the same day peace treaties modeled after those already entered into by Secretary Bryan with sixteen nations. The signing awaits only the approval of the British treaty by the British self-governing colonies to which it has been submitted.

The Anglo-American and the Franco-American treaties will in a general way follow the treaty already signed by Secretary Bryan with the Netherlands. They provide that all questions arising between the United States and the respective European powers which cannot be settled by diplomacy shall be submitted for investigation for a period of at least a year to a commission of five members. During the investigation hostilities would not be entered into, but the findings of the commission would not be binding.

Secretary Bryan and Minister Bryn have agreed upon the terms of a similar treaty between the United States and Norway, which will be signed at the State Department within a few days.

TO INVESTIGATE PALESTINE.

American Commission Will Report on Condition of the Jews There.

Dr. Stephen S. Wise, rabbi of the Free Synagogue, announced yesterday that a commission had been appointed to make a social survey of the conditions affecting Jews in Palestine.

Upon the suggestion of Dr. Wise, and with the co-operation of Adolph Lewisohn, Nathan Straus, and the American Ambassador to Constantinople, a committee was formed consisting of Mr. Lewisohn, Chairman; Ambassador Morgenthau, Nathan Straus, Dr. L. K. Frankel, Louis D. Brandeis, and Dr. Wise, to select the commission. This will consist of Dr. Milton J. Rosenau, a distinguished sanitarian who is Professor of Preventive Medicine and Hygiene in the Harvard Medical School; Dr. Boris D. Bogen, head of the Jewish Charity Work of Cincinnati, and Meyer Bloomfield, Director of the Vocation Bureau of Boston and Professor of Vocational Guidance at the Boston University.

The committee plans to make an intensive social survey of Jewish conditions within and without Jerusalem in September, and upon its return to America a report of its findings will be published.

ROY AND HYLAN LOSE.

Appointment of Kings Co. Judges Illegal, Appellate Division Rules.

The Appellate Division in Brooklyn yesterday unanimously sustained the decision of Justice Walter Jaycox of the Supreme Court in declaring that the appointment of Robert H. Roy and John F. Hylan to serve as County Judges in Kings County was illegal. The Court declared that Gov. Glynn was without authority in making the appointments.

The Appellate Division also affirmed the decision of Justice Jaycox, who remanded to prison Rosie Gross, a pickpocket, who sought freedom on the ground that Judge Hylan had no right to sentence her because he was not a judge. The action to have the appointments of Hylan and Roy declared illegal was instituted by William H. Snyder, a taxpayer, who brought quo warranto proceedings through Lawyer Hugo Hirsh. Both cases will be taken as soon as possible to the Court of Appeals. The lawyers interested said yesterday that they would be ready to argue before that body within ten days and a final decision is expected before the end of this month.

INSURANCE COMPANIES WIN.

Kentucky Law Held Unconstitutional—No Appeal Likely.

PARIS, Ky., June 12.—The Green-Glenn insurance law passed by the last Legislature, and which caused the withdrawal of 104 fire companies from the State, was declared unconstitutional by Judge R. L. Stout in the Circuit Court here today. The State authorities said they would not appeal.

An agreement between the insurance companies and the State which would permit the companies to resume business was reached Wednesday at Louisville. Today's ruling left the companies in the same position they occupied before the law was passed and all probably will resume business.

Trinity Corporation's Trustees.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Without having any especial interest in Trinity Corporation other than a somewhat intimate knowledge of the workings of the chapels maintained by it, I would like to say a word in connection with the agitation to force Mr. Jay and his fellows to present St. John's Chapel to the city for a museum. Any criticism of these gentlemen is not fair that leaves out of the account that they are but links in a chain, bound on the one hand with Trustees before them and on the other with those to follow, all under solemn obligations to use the funds of Trinity Church for the best advantage of the parishes in which the chapels are located. What would be thought of Trustees in charge of the property of minor heirs who for sentimental or other reasons gave away a parcel of ground capable of being a revenue producer for the heirs? But Trinity's Trustees are in charge of the affairs of generations yet unborn. Must they say to their successors, "Yes, we did have another valuable piece of property, but the city asked us for it and we gave it away"?

As I understand it, Mr. Jay proposes to give the building and sell the ground at a reasonable price to any institution that will make municipal uses of it. This to an outsider seems to be coming more than half way. Now let these artistic souls, some of whom never gave a dollar to "teach the orphan boy to read" or "the orphan girl to sew" get to work and meet Trinity on this offer. Mr. Jay and the other Trustees evidently have no notion of having future generations say of them, "We asked for bread and they gave us an artistic pile of stone."

WOMEN CLEAR WAY FOR SUFFRAGE FIGHT

FORCE PRESIDENT INTO LINE

Clever Parliamentary Move Will Introduce Sweeping Resolution Giving Federation's "Moral Support."

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 12.—The delegates of the General Federation of Women's Clubs have cleared the decks for the most bitter fight of the biennial convention. Tomorrow the convention will take up the question of woman suffrage.

Mrs. Joseph A. Leach of Louisville, Ky., will introduce a suffrage resolution soon after the opening of the business session at 9:30 o'clock in the Auditorium Theatre.

Mrs. Percy U. Pennypacker, the President of the General Federation, will give the first place on the programme to the most popular topic at the convention. The resolution reads:

Whereas, The question of political equality of men and women is today a vital problem under discussion throughout the civilized world, be it

Resolved, That the General Federation of Women's Clubs give the cause of political equality for men and women its moral support by recording its earnest belief in the principle of political equality regardless of sex.

It is believed that the Leach resolution will be presented after the report of the resolutions committee on the suffrage resolutions before it. Rumors that the committee would report a weak indorsement of suffrage, calculated not to antagonize even the antis of the Federation were current tonight. The Leach resolution, it is said, will be offered from the floor as a substitute. Such action, it is believed, has the strong backing of the majority of the convention delegates and the resolution, the suffragists assert, will be passed over the heads of the members of the resolutions committee if they show any opposition to the full indorsement of the suffrage movement. This is the only manner in which a resolution may be brought before the convention without being submitted to the committee.

Suffragists will crowd the Auditorium to the doors to be present when the resolution is acted upon. Dozens of resolutions are being prepared, to be submitted to the committee by State delegations and individuals. One measure strongly favored by women who are as deeply interested in the Federation as they are in suffrage will suggest that the Federation seek to obtain the views of clubwomen in all parts of the country on the suffrage problem before attending the biennial of 1916.

Following Mrs. Pennybacker's announcement at this morning's session that the suffrage issue soon would be considered by the convention, conferences between the local leaders and Mrs. Pennybacker were held. The resolution drawn by Mrs. Leach is said to be satisfactory both to Mrs. Pennybacker, the federation officers, and the local leaders.

Little or no opposition is expected on the floor when suffrage is introduced for discussion because there is a federation rule that resolutions shall deal only with subjects which have been discussed on the floor. Miss Helen Varick Boswell of New York referred in the briefest possible manner to suffrage at the educational conference this afternoon.

Mrs. John L. Ruhl of West Virginia, who followed Miss Boswell, was on her feet less than a minute, but this was long enough for her to declare herself heart and soul for the suffrage cause. Prolonged applause greeted her statement.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt of New York, President of the International Woman's Suffrage Alliance, addressed the convention tonight. The suffragists were present in force and applauded vigorously. Her speech on the eve of battle was regarded as a happy omen.

The convention during the day adopted the reports on civil service reform presented by Mrs. Imogen B. Oakley of Philadelphia; education by Mrs. O. Shepard Barnum of California, and legislation by Mrs. Horace Mann Towner of Washington, D. C.

Ella Flagg Young, Superintendent of Schools of Chicago, delivered a brief address on "Education in a Democracy." Peace, agricultural credits, State penal and charitable institutions, naturalization, the short ballot, unemployment, social legislation, social hygiene, and vocational training were among subjects discussed by other speakers, including Jane Addams, Prof. Frank M. Leavitt of the University of Chicago, Miss Mary Garrett Hay of New York, and Dr. Lillian W. Johnson of Tennessee.

ALBANY, June 12.—The Empire State Campaign Committee, composed of suffragists, is a political organization and, therefore, not entitled to use State armories for mass meetings, Lieut. Col. William W. Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Representative William G. Sharp of Elyria, O., was nominated today by President Wilson to be Ambassador to France. Mr. Sharp's confirmation will not be opposed. GARRISON PRAISES ARMY AS HANDY MAN Tells West Point Class to be Prepared for Any Kind of Work Anywhere.

CITES RECENT RELIEF WORK

And the Occupation and Government of Vera Cruz—First Filipino Among the Graduates.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, June 12.—The graduation of the class of 1914 this morning brought the "June week" festivities to an end, and the Academy is settling back into its regular routine this evening. The old graduates who came back for reunions, the graduates and furlough men, are leaving on every train. The class of '09 remains over tonight to celebrate its reunion in the Red Room of the Officers' Club.

The graduating exercises this morning were held at the Battle Monument on Trophy Hill before a large assemblage of friends and relatives of the cadets. Secretary Garrison of the War Department made the address.

Secretary Garrison told his audience that "the American Army has become the all-around handy man of the Government." "But," he added, "I do not suppose that even you, who are in and of the army, have had brought home to you the extent to which this is so; and I feel sure that the country does not realize it at all. You may be called upon at any time to do any kind of service in any part of the world—and if you would not fall below the standard your fellows have set, you must be ready and you must do it, and you must do it well."

The Secretary then proceeded to enumerate some of the "handy-man" achievements of the army since March 4, 1913—the date when he succeeded to the Secretaryship of the department. Among these he called attention to its work in rescuing lives, maintaining law and order, and distributing food, clothing, and medicines during the disastrous floods in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, West Virginia, Missouri, Tennessee, Arkansas, Kentucky, Mississippi, and Louisiana during the Spring of last year; the performance of similar offices in the path of the tornado which visited Omaha, Neb., and contiguous territory during the same season; the fighting of the forest fires at Mount Tamalipas, Cal., in July of 1913, and in the Adirondack Mountains later in the Summer; of the efficient service which the Mexican border has been patrolled and lawlessness reduced to a seeming minimum; its establishment of law and order in the Colorado coal-strike war zone and the restoration of the chaotic conditions there to normality; and, lastly, the army's admirable achievement in the occupation and government of the Mexican port of Vera Cruz.

In conclusion he said:

"And now a word as to why the army is thus capable. As nearly as it can be summed up in one word, it is because of character. Character, you know, is the mark made by the tool of the graver. Our characters are the result of the marks made upon us by the attrition of the hard facts and experiences of life. The army officer starts off with an education and a spirit. He learns to control others by learning self-control. He learns that no orderly government is possible unless the citizen exercises self-control and to submit to proper discipline. He learns to do whatever he is set to do, and to do it with all that is in him. He learns to take orders and carry them out, and to give orders and insist upon obedience. And finally, he learns that in no rank of life and in no field of endeavor can any man do better or go further than in his own, where his motto always has been and always will be—Honor, valor, and vigor."

Col. Townsley distributed the diplomas as Capt. Vidmer, Adjutant of the Academy, called each graduate's name. The Superintendent shook hands with each and congratulated the men as they came forward. Secretary Garrison made an exception in the cases of Cadets Holcombe and Lim as they left his seat to shake hands and extend congratulations to them. Holcombe was the honor man of the class, graduating number one, while Lim is a Filipino, the first from that country to graduate at West Point.

After the exercises the men got into their civilian clothes quickly and made for the boats and trains. They were joined in New York at the Hotel Astor by the cadets of the second class, who went on a three months' furlough at noon today.

The battalion was reorganized after graduation today and the new officers were announced. Cadets Woodruff, Hocker, Strong, Davison, Ferris, and Larkin were made Captains. Cadet Altman is the new Adjutant, and Cadet Summers Quartermaster. Cadet Prichard was made Sergeant Major and Cadet Corbin Battalion Quartermaster Sergeant.

WEST POINTERS AT ASTOR.

Theatre, Class Smoker, and Banquet at Midnight.

The Astor assumed a warlike tone when the field gun that is kept for emergencies was drawn into the lobby yesterday morning and its muzzle trained on the amusement palace opposite. That is what happens when the cadets from West Point come to town, so that those who know that field piece realized at once that the mediators were not expected from Niagara and that no hostile invasion was to be feared from the tango institution directly across the way.

The cadets reached town just before 2 o'clock—that is to say, the graduating class which had been turned out from the Military Academy in the morning and the furlough classmen, who have got leave until Aug. 29.

The lobby was a pretty busy place for a time, but that wasn't a circumstance to what it was later in the afternoon when a special train reached New York bearing the fathers and mothers and sweethearts of the new Second Lieutenants and of the members of the class of 1916.

In the evening both classes attended a performance of "High Jinks" at the Casino. This was followed at 11:15 by a smoker given by the new officers, and at midnight by a class banquet given by the furlough men. The latter went to the theatre in full dress with white trousers, while the graduates took advantage of being on three months' leave and went in plain clothes.

A spokesman for the graduates said that none was willing to discuss the possibility of war in Mexico.

"But, of course, if there should be," he added, "every one of us wants to go to the front."

PRINCETON CLANS GATHER.

Unusual Number of Alumni Will Greet President Wilson.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, June 12.—More than a thousand Princeton alumni with half a dozen bands to make their music arrived today. Besides these, probably as many more friends of alumni and students got here for the commencement.

The fact that President Wilson will spend most of tomorrow with his class has drawn an unusually large attendance of alumni.

The reunions of alumni are already under way and there is much local interest in the novel costumes of the several classes. The men of '08 arrived this afternoon wearing blue suits with knickerbockers trimmed with lace. The married members wore pairs of threes, the three of hearts and the three of diamonds upon their shoulders. The unmarried "blackguards" wore the three of spades and the three of clubs.

The upper class clubs held their formal commencement dinners this evening and the freshmen prefaced the dinners by marching in Prospect Avenue, the home of the clubs, with fireworks and a band. After the banquets the alumni thronged Nassau Street, meeting old friends, and there was many a friendly glass sipped at the Nassau Inn.

The Senior Council of Princeton, an undergraduate governing body composed exclusively of seniors and representing the pinnacle of undergraduate extra curriculum honors, was announced this morning by its predecessor, the 1914 Senior Council. The basis for election is representative character and individual efficiency. The membership follows:

H. R. Ball of New York, J. V. Forrestal of Beacon, N. Y., J. L. Mott of Montclair, William Ellis of New Orleans, R. S. Cowan of Washington, O. S. Putnam of Johnstown, N. Y.; I. D. MacKenzie of Hartford, Conn.; W. Stewart of Auburn, N. Y.; G. B. Logan of Allegheny, Penn.; D. Fleming of Harrisburg, Penn.; H. Froelick of Brooklyn, J. G. McConnel of Pittsburgh, D. Myrick of Springfield, Mass.; R. Eard of Hueneme, Cal., and J. C. McKibben of St. Paul, Minn.

Princeton Chapter, Phi Beta Kappa, today announced the following elections from the graduating class, completing the quota of one-tenth of the entire class: Marcus A. Spencer of Pittsburgh, Allen W. Dulles of Auburn, Pierce Butler of Minneapolis, and Gilchrist B. Stockton of Jacksonville.

CHARITIES.

SOMETHING ELSE FOR YOU TO THINK ABOUT

Every mail is bringing requests for fresh air relief in behalf of the dwellers of the crowded tenement districts who cannot help themselves.

Physicians, hospitals and dispensaries are interceding for the dependent sick.

School teachers, settlements, and churches are pleading the cause of rundown school children, overworked shop girls and "little mothers."

Nurses and those fighting infant mortality are appealing for the "little bundles of human misery" as one characterized the puny baby in her charge.

THE A. I. C. P. MEETS REAL NEEDS, NOT MERE DESIRES, and will, therefore, invest your fresh air contribution where it will do the most good.

THOMAS DOLAN, FINANCIER, DIES

Retired Head of United Gas Improvement Company Succumbs at 79.

BEGAN CAREER IN POVERTY

Made Fortune in Manufacture of Textiles and Operation of Car Lines—Associate of Widener.

PHILADELPHIA, June 12.—Thomas Dolan, one of the wealthiest men in Philadelphia and once a member of the Widener-Elkins-Whitney street railway syndicate, died today at his home at Torresdale, near here. He was 79 years old and had been in poor health for a long time.

Although he ran, as Chairman of the Board of Directors, until recently the operations of the United Gas Improvement Company, which owns gas and electric light plants, street railways, and water companies in various cities from the Mississippi Valley to the Atlantic Coast, Mr. Dolan had practically retired from public activities since the gas lease fight in Philadelphia in 1905.

Thomas Dolan was born in Montgomery County, Penn., on Oct. 27, 1834. He had little opportunity to obtain an education in early life, and was compelled to enter business at the age of 15. For six years he was in the retail dry goods business, and then opened an importing and commission house. By 1861 he had so prospered that he went into the manufacture of knit goods; later extending to worsted goods, in which he remained actively interested until 1897.

In the eighties Mr. Dolan began his investments in public utilities corporations, and in time was elected to the Presidency of the United Gas Improvement Company of Philadelphia, which is capitalized at $55,000,000, and was interested in public service corporations in more than forty cities over the country. He was associated with the Widener and Elkins interests, and was a heavy holder of stock in gas, electric lighting, traction, and railway companies in all parts of the United States.

Mr. Dolan's keen judgment and determination of spirit were illustrated when he was a child as 8 years. At that age he drew a line as possible used of electricity for street lighting and applied in Philadelphia, Baltimore, and New York for municipal co-operation and permission that would enable him to string wires and lights in the streets of these cities; but every one was skeptical. In the face of Mr. Dolan's arguments. So sure was he of his plans, however, that he volunteered to light Chestnut Street in Philadelphia from the Delaware to the Schuylkill at his own expense for one year. He organized the Brush Electric Company and was allowed to erect his poles and string his wires while others laughed. But before the year of grace was over municipalities everywhere were enthusiastic about electrically lighted streets.

Mr. Dolan became the centre of a public storm in 1886 that lasted with varying intensity until 1905. In the former year he proposed that the Philadelphia gas works be rented to himself and Wharton Barker for a period of twenty-five years for a cash rental of $1,000,000 a year. The proposal provoked popular protest, which resulted in a refusal of Mr. Dolan's offer by the city Government and the assumption of the management of the gas works by a municipal bureau. This bureau continued in operation for eleven years, with annually increasing deficits. Finally in December, 1897, Mr. Dolan obtained his desired control of the city gas works on a lease for a limited number of years. All went well for several years, and Mr. Dolan added considerably to his means. In 1905 the storm broke out again, for in that year Mr. Dolan proposed that the lease of the gas works be extended to a term of seventy-five years, the United Gas Improvement Company to pay the city $25,000,000 in consideration. This surrender of its share in the profits of the United Gas Improvement Company which were provided for under the old lease. Public opposition was so strong that this proposal was never adopted.

Mr. Dolan resigned from the Presidency of the United Gas Improvement Company in March, 1912. His brain was still active, but his health was beginning to fail. It was generally stated at the time of his resignation that to his brain and energy was due the great growth of the corporation which he had headed since 1892.

JAMES CAMPBELL DIES OF PNEUMONIA

Ex-Head of North American Company Was Recently Operated Upon for a Carbuncle.

MADE $50,000,000 IN ROADS

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., June 12.—James Campbell, who made a fortune estimated at more than $50,000,000 in railroads and mines in the West and was President of the North American Company when it filed a receivership suit in 1913 against the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad, died tonight at the age of 67 years at his Summer home at Indian Field.

Three weeks ago he was operated on by Drs. Delafield and Rundequest of New York for a carbuncle on the neck. Pneumonia developed later. The body will be sent to St. Louis.

Mr. Campbell was born in Ireland. When he was 2 years old his parents came to this country, settling in West Virginia. He went to school until he was 11 years old and then took a job as a grocer's clerk. He was sent, after the war had started, to deliver supplies to an army camp outside of Wheeling. Gen. Frémont, the Pathfinder, took a fancy to the boy and employed him for $8 a week as a messenger. Young Campbell's duty was to stand in front of the General's tent and permit those visitors to enter whom the General wanted to see.

After the war Gen. Frémont came to New York and took offices in the Empire Building, still employing Campbell as a messenger boy. Later Gen. Frémont placed the boy in the engineering department of the Southwest Pacific Railroad, which ran fifty miles out of St. Louis and was projected as a link in a new transcontinental railroad.

For a number of years he followed the chain, and by self-education equipped himself to become the head of an engineering corps. He was appointed Chief Engineer of the Kansas City, Missouri & Mobile Railroad, which later became a part of the Frisco system.

His first financial venture was made in 1873, when he bought up the bonds of a number of counties in Missouri, which were in default. By mortgaging his holdings to the limit, he was able to purchase bonds worth half a million at their face value for prices ranging from 10 to 40 cents on the dollar. Railroad building restored prosperity in the State, and Campbell reaped immense profits.

In 1877 he opened a brokerage office in St. Louis and later purchased the franchise of the Bellefontaine line. He transformed it from a mule car line to an electric line and made it a valuable property. After that he continued to acquire public utilities until, when he quit active business a few years ago, he controlled practically all of the public utilities of St. Louis. Next he engaged in the field of railroad building and ownership. He became interested in a number of electric roads and was a pioneer in the field of supplying heat, light and power by high tension electric currents from dynamos driven by natural water power.

He acquired a large interest in the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad and became Vice President of it. Until a few years ago he used to take a great deal of pride in the fact that in all his business life, during which he had been engaged in transactions involving hundreds of millions of dollars, the court records showed that he had only two suits against him. That record, however, did not survive the collapse of the Frisco system.

Mr. Campbell became the President and was at his death Chairman of the Board of Directors of the North American Company, which succeeded in placing the Frisco in the hands of a receiver. Although this occurred several years after Mr. Campbell had retired from active business, suits were filed against him by stockholders, who blamed the failure of the Frisco to its policy at the time he was one of its officers.

BROWN, LIKE LANTRY IS OUT FOR WHITMAN

Fifteenth District Moose Leader Takes Issue with Chairman Bird.

WRITES OF "MACHINERY"

Says District Attorney Favors Fundamental Planks of Progressive Platform.

William Grant Brown, a lawyer, who is the Bull Moose leader in the Fifteenth Assembly District, came out yesterday unqualifiedly for indorsement of District Attorney Whitman's candidacy for the Governorship by the Progressive Party. He said Mr. Whitman has already gone on record as favoring the fundamental planks on the Progressive platform.

Mr. Brown was one of the first Republicans to join the Progressive Party after the Republican National Convention in 1912 had bowled out Col. Roosevelt and nominated Mr. Taft. Both Mr. Brown and his wife took a prominent part in the Progressive campaign in this State two years ago. Mrs. Brown was one of the woman delegates to the Bull Moose Convention in Syracuse, which was stampeded for Oscar S. Straus. Mrs. Brown ascended the platform and made a speech while the stampeding was in progress.

Mr. Brown went on record as favoring the indorsement of Mr. Whitman in a letter to Francis W. Bird, Chairman of the New York County Progressive Committee. The letter was in response to one Mr. Bird had sent to all the district leaders, denying the printed reports from Oyster Bay just prior to the Colonel's departure for Spain, according to which the Colonel was willing to accept and support either ex-Senator Harvey D. Hinman or Mr. Whitman should the Republicans nominate one of the two for Governor, on the condition that if elected they would do all in their power to bring about the elimination of Republican State Chairman William Barnes.

"Why are both Republican and Progressive machines opposed to Judge Whitman for Governor?" wrote Mr. Brown. "The answer is to be found in the reason why the rank and file of both these parties are overwhelmingly for Roosevelt first, and, if they cannot have him, they demand Whitman. The west side is practically unanimous for Judge Whitman if they cannot have Mr. Roosevelt. The tide of public and private disaster must be stemmed without regard to the effect upon the party machinery of either or both parties. To be conservative and charitable, let us go no further than to say that the Government at Albany and Washington is incompetent and must be supplanted in the public interest."

Mr. Brown declares that for the Progressives and Republicans to "go it alone" would be tantamount to giving the Democrats a certificate of election next Fall.

"Col. Roosevelt cannot be expected to accept the nomination for Governor for obvious reasons," Mr. Brown writes. "After him, the question then arises, who can be elected who is opposed to at present and whose election would be inimical to the bi-partisan system preserved by Barnes and Murphy? The Barnes subsidized system of politics has brought us where we are. It is the bulwark of all the powers that prey upon the people. No man that owes any allegiance to or solicits any assistance from the Barnes machine can win. Progressives and decent Republicans and the unenrolled voters will not support such a candidate. The Republican machine will nominate no man who will not openly proclaim his opposition to the fundamental planks in our platform. Judge Whitman favors those planks and will throw down the gauntlet of responsive representative government guaranteed by those planks to Barnes and his kind."

The Progressive leaders, despite the dispatch from Madrid, printed in THE TIMES yesterday morning, in which Col. Roosevelt was declared in unquestionable authority "to be for Mr. Whitman on the condition that Barnes was eliminated, still expressed the belief that the Colonel would be a candidate. The talk of an amalgamation this Fall is being attributed very widely in Bull Moose circles to attempts on the part of Progressives who are interested in the candidacy of Oscar S. Straus for United States Senator to bring about a deal whereby Republican support will be given to him in return for Progressive support for Mr. Whitman.

NEW SLOGAN FOR MOOSE.

Perkins Suggests, "Shall We Gather at the River?"

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., June 12.—State Senator William E. Ramsay of Perth Amboy collaborated with George W. Perkins in coining a new Bull Moose slogan at the inspection of Palisades Interstate Park on Wednesday. The Senator and two other men came upon Mr. Perkins on a stroll, and the Progressive Executive Chairman asked where they had been.

"Oh," said Dr. Ramsay, "we've been walking through the woods, and we found a new river."

"Ha, ha," laughed Perkins, "that reminds me that I've been thinking of a new slogan for the Progressives. Last year we marched to the strains of 'Onward, Christian Soldiers.' This year it looks as though it will be, 'Shall We Gather at the River?'"

KRACKE IN CONGRESS RACE.

Commissioner May Succeed Calder, Who Aspires to Senate.

Republicans of the Sixth Congress District, Brooklyn, are booming Bridge Commissioner F. J. H. Kracke to succeed Congressman William H. Calder, who has represented that district for ten years. Mr. Calder will seek nomination for the United States Senate to succeed Senator Root. The district is made up of the Park Slope, Flatbush, and Bedford sections of Brooklyn. In the Democratic landslide in 1912 Congressman Calder was the only Republican in this city who was returned to Congress. A Republican nomination in that district would amount to an election.

Moose-Democratic Union in Utah.

SALT LAKE CITY, June 12.—The Democratic and Progressive State Conventions, held separately here yesterday, combined on a State ticket, nominating James H. Moyle of Salt Lake City, Democrat, for United States Senator; Frank B. Stephens of Salt Lake City, Democrat, for Supreme Court Justice; James H. Mays of Salt Lake City, Progressive, and Lewis Larson of Manti, Progressive, for Representatives in Congress.

MRS. MITCHEL RAISES FLAG.

Orator Tells High School Girls She's "Best Dancer."

Mrs. John Purroy Mitchel in sight of 5,000 girls of the Washington Irving School, who were massed in Irving Place in front of the school building, pulled on a rope which bore a flag aloft until it stopped at the top of the pole more than a hundred feet above. Then red, white and blue streamers reaching to the ground were released from the roof of the building and a colonial salute of thirteen guns was given by twelve girls with bright red hair, who styled themselves "mascots," although they appeared on the programme as "maids of honor."

Of course it was a powderless, ladylike salute, consisting of thirteen "booms" from the mouths of the "mascots," but it was sounded so impressively that all of the spectators clapped their hands until the streets echoed with the applause.

The exercises, which were held to commemorate the adoption of the stars and stripes as the "flag of this country," began at 11:15 in the school auditorium. At noon the flag raising took place and at 1:30 the auditorium exercises were repeated for the afternoon classes. All of the classes went on as usual.

When Mrs. Mitchel arrived at the school, J. Frank Supplee, a representative of the Mayor of Baltimore, was speaking in the auditorium about the origin of the flag. The girls sang a song of welcome to the Mayor's wife, and when the song was finished, Mr. Supplee referred to Mrs. Mitchel as "the best dancer in New York." He had "Hesitated" with her, he said, and he knew.

"New York should be noted—next to Baltimore—as the home of America's most beautiful women," Mr. Supplee added.

Ernest Eilert, of the Board of Education, who spoke before Mr. Supplee, expressed the hope that this country would never witness the spectacle of "the woman on the horseback." Mr. Eilert said woman's place was in the home. James F. McInness spoke on "The Flag and Its Meaning."

The open air exercises, at which Mrs. Mitchel officiated, were held on a platform at the entrance to the school. The Mayor's wife was escorted by a procession of drummers, shield bearers, flag bearers, maids of honor, and Presidents Winfred Cantwell and Bertha Rodetsky of the morning and afternoon classes. Mrs. Mitchel accepted the invitation of the committee and remained for luncheon in the Municipal dining room on the fourth floor.

PAULA DANA PUTS ON ACT II.

Actress Pleads with Tears for Freedom of Man She Sued for $50,000.

Col. Edward Harrison Power, a mining man from the West, was arrested on May 8 last on the complaint of Miss Maude Mittern, who accused him of breaking a promise to marry her and sued for $50,000. Miss Mittern is an actress and is known on the stage as Paula Dana. She was in tears when she proceeded against the Colonel, but she was savage, too, and appeared to be relieved when the Colonel was required to put up a bond and was prohibited from leaving this State.

Yesterday afternoon Miss Mittern called on Sheriff Grifenhagen and asked him to please release the Colonel from the bonds. She was in tears again and she explained that it wasn't fair to keep the Colonel here when he wanted to go to Pittsburgh to look after some important business.

"Please let him go," wailed Miss Mittern. "It was in a moment of anger that I had him arrested. He can do no business here because all his business lies in the far, far West. And then, again, it is getting so warm and the Colonel is fat, and so please, please release him from thraldom."

Miss Mittern cried a little and then she went on:

"Scarcely five short minutes had elapsed after I had him arrested in the Hotel McAlpin ere I was sorry that your deputies took him away. Now I am so sorry and I want him free, free as the birds. He is so good, too. In his own country he is a big man and his heart is big like the big West."

Sheriff Grifenhagen told Miss Mittern that he could not help her, and advised her to see a lawyer so that application might be made to the courts. Miss Mittern walked slowly away with her face in her handkerchief.

SIWASH INDIAN CONVICTED.

Stamen Faces Sing Sing for Hold-Up in Central Park.

Alfred R. Stamen, a Siwash Indian, was convicted of robbery in the first degree yesterday before Judge Malone in General Sessions. He came here in May with the 101 Ranch Wild West Show and held up and robbed Miss Rose Bugin of 1,292 Park Avenue and Albert Moskowitz of 225 East 110th Street in Central Park on May 28.

While the Indian flashed a pocket light on the couple another man who was with him stole a pocketbook containing $10.25 from Miss Bugin. The young woman screamed and Policeman McInerney ran up and caught Stamen, but the other man got away. Stamen, whose home is on the Greenwich Indian Reservation in Oregon, will be sentenced next Friday.

WHITMAN CLEARS THOMAS HASSETT

District Attorney Tells Court That the Evidence He Has Would Not Convict.

COMPLAINANT'S CASE WEAK

Three Indictments Growing Out of Graft Investigation to be Disposed Of.

Thomas Hassett, formerly Secretary to the Board of Water Supply and for many years connected with State Engineer John A. Bensel in a confidential capacity, was freed yesterday from the indictment charging him with attempted grand larceny.

District Attorney Whitman, in a written communication to Justice Davis favoring the quashing of the indictment, impugned the motive of the complaining witness in Hassett's case, ex-Mayor Anthony C. Douglass of Niagara Falls. On the evidence in hand, the District Attorney said, no conviction could be expected.

Hassett was a storm centre in the District Attorney's recent graft investigation. His name bobbed up a number of times, both in connection with his work for the Water Board and for the State Engineer. On Dec. 30 last, he was indicted on the specific charge that he attempted to get $50,000 from Douglass through misrepresentation. The crime was alleged to have been committed in June, 1911. Douglass was in the contracting business at that time, and had bid on the work of constructing the big Catskill aqueduct under the Hudson River, near Cornwall, known as the Hudson siphon. Douglass's bid was $217,000 lower than that of the T. A. Gillespie Company, but Gillespie got the job. Douglass charged Hassett with trying to land this contract for him for a consideration of $50,000.

From the District Attorney's explanation of the case at this time, it appears that Douglass was not such a willing witness after he saw the consequences of his testimony. The light of the investigation was turned upon him, and two letters which he wrote to Deputy State Treasurer George W. Batten reached Mr. Whitman's office. In his statement to Justice Davis, Mr. Whitman said:

During the preparation of this case for trial it was learned for the first time that the complaining witness had been in constant communication with the defendant after the date of the alleged attempt to obtain Douglass's money.

Two letters written by Douglass to Mr. Batten seriously discredit the motives of Douglass in testifying as he did testify before the Grand Jury. These letters show that Douglass was at that time, with the defendant Hassett's assistance, striving to procure monetary compensation from this contractor to whom the contract referred to in the indictment was finally awarded.

These letters, coupled with Douglass's efforts to keep in close communication with the defendant for a period of several months subsequent to the date of the alleged transaction, have satisfied me that, had these facts been before the Grand Jury, no indictment would have been found. A trial of the defendant upon this indictment would not result in a conviction.

Indictments were found against four persons in the graft investigation.

Arthur A. McLean, for sixteen years Treasurer of the Democratic State Committee, pleaded guilty to accepting a campaign contribution from a corporation.

Everett Fowler, the "bagman" for the Democratic Committee, was indicted for alleged extortion from a contractor doing State work. The question of jurisdiction was raised in Fowler's case, and the question is now before the Appellate Division. As the result of another angle of the graft investigation, Fowler has been sued by the city for alleged overcharges in bills for the settlement of claims on the Catskill aqueduct lands.

Hassett was the third man indicted.

The fourth was James K. McGuire, ex-Mayor of Syracuse. He is accused of soliciting a campaign contribution from a corporation in this city.

It was said yesterday that the District Attorney would not move for his trial until the Fall.

MERSEY HERE FOR INQUIRY.

Arrives on Mauretania to Preside at Empress Investigation.

Lord Mersey, P. C., arrived yesterday from England on the Cunarder Mauretania on his way to Canada, where he will preside over the joint British and Canadian inquiry into the cause of the collision between the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Ireland and the Danish collier Storstad. He was accompanied by Commander W. S. Caborne and Prof. J. J. Welch, the two assessors appointed by the British Government, and J. A. Webster, principal clerk to the British Board of Trade.

In a brief talk in his cabin, Lord Mersey said that he was suffering from a slight twinge of the gout in his right foot, which necessitated his walking with a cane, but his health was quite good for a man in his seventy-fourth year.

"As I understand, the investigation," he said, "to be held at Quebec, commencing next Tuesday, is to determine the question of the accident and to decide whether there was criminal negligence, either on the part of the Canadian Pacific liner or the Storstad."

"How long do you think the investigation will last?" he was asked. "If it is confined, as I said, to the cause of the collision, it may be over in a week or ten days, but if other outside issues are taken up, such as the rules for navigating the St. Lawrence, then it may last much longer."

Lord Mersey added that this inquiry would not interfere with persons bringing suit against the Canadian Pacific Company for damages. "I do not mean that the decision of the members of the Board of Inquiry would not have any effect on the question of damages, but we are not going to assemble to pass on claims such as were determined in the United States by Judge Holt," he said.

Lord Mersey, who is making his first visit to this country, was met at the pier by ex-Judge George C. Holt, C. C. Burlingham, D. R. Ensler, and Howard Harrington, members of the Maritime Law Society of New York, with whom he lunched at the Hotel Belmont before leaving for Ottawa, where he will confer with the Canadian Government officials on the procedure of the Court of Inquiry at Quebec.

Also on the Mauretania, but not included in Lord Mersey's party, was Butler Aspinall, K. C., who has been retained by the Canadian Pacific as counsel at the inquiry to act with Arthur D. Holden of Montreal.

MURPHY MEN PLEAD GUILTY.

Three Inspectors in 12th District Admit Election Frauds.

Three of the twenty-eight men who are under indictment for alleged frauds at the constitutional convention election on April 7 went before Justice Davis in the Criminal Term of the Supreme Court yesterday and entered pleas of guilty. They are Edward I. Stephenson of 34 Bayside Place, Rockaway; Abraham Greene of 500 East Twelfth Street, and Edward H. Lown, all election Inspectors of the Twelfth Assembly District. At the request of District Attorney Whitman sentence was deferred until next Tuesday. Bail of $2,500 in each case was continued.

Twenty-two others are expected to plead on Monday or Tuesday. It is understood that there will be many other pleas of guilty.

Hallett Will Distributes $100,000.

Hallett, a son, of 95 Remsen Street; Walter E. Hallett, a son, of this city, and a daughter, Aletta M. Stead of Princeton, N. J. Mrs. Adelaide A. Mr. Marshall Scull tells the story of an adventurous big game hunt, of which the trophies include specimens of practically all the game to be met with in Alaska, the Western Arctic Ocean, and the shores of Siberia.

The Uttermost Farthing
A rare treat for lovers of mystery and adventure stories. When Humphrey Challoner—a specialist in criminal anthropology—dedicated his life to the apprehension and punishment of his wife's murderer, he "started something" that is absolutely new in mystery fiction. Mr. Freeman has created a curious and indescribable atmosphere not only so weird and real, but so irresistible to the reader, that one is strongly reminded of Edgar Allan Poe.

FOUR STATE BANKS CLOSED IN CHICAGO

STARTED BY WOMAN'S SUIT

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 12.—Four State banks, one of which was headed by William Lorimer, former United States Senator, were closed today by the State Banking Department pending an investigation. They were:

The La Salle Street Trust and Savings Bank, La Salle and Quincy Streets. President, William Lorimer; Vice Presidents, C. B. Munday, L. L. Bacchus, J. M. Logan; Cashier, Charles G. Fox. Paid up capital, $1,000,000.

The Broadway State Bank, 4,613 Broadway. President, P. A. Hazard; Vice Presidents, J. H. Rife, E. E. Hughes; Cashier, E. E. Hughes. Paid up capital, $200,000.

The Illinois State Bank, 350 North Clark Street. President, Louis Mayer; Vice President, E. V. Bacharach; Cashier, W. H. Tholen. Paid up capital, $200,000.

The Ashland-Twelfth State Bank, Ashland Boulevard and Twelfth Street. President, C. B. Munday; Vice President, E. J. Potts; Cashier, Abraham Levin. Paid up capital, $200,000.

The four were known as the Lorimer-Munday chain of banks and the La Salle Street Trust and Savings Bank was the main institution, the others being outlying concerns whose balances and reserves were carried to a great extent by it. Combined, they have deposits of $6,411,997 and reported cash assets of $1,434,092. Of their deposits $906,000 consists of city funds. The bulk of this amount, $650,000, is on deposit with the La Salle Street Bank.

City Funds Tied Up.

City Treasurer Michael J. Flynn late yesterday afternoon made a demand on the La Salle Street Trust and Savings Bank for $650,000 of city funds and was there early this morning to get the money. He was accompanied by Assistant City Treasurer A. J. Keefe, and Colin C. H. Fyffe, his attorney. When they arrived at the bank they were met by Daniel Harkin, Chief Bank Examiner, a protégé of Roger C. Sullivan.

"You must wait until the hour for opening the bank doors," said Mr. Harkin.

Mr. Flynn and his associates were the first to enter when the heavy doors swung open. Behind them had formed a line of other depositors. Mr. Flynn stepped to the paying teller's window and made formal demand for the city funds.

This bank cannot pay out any money at this time," said Mr. Harkin. "Its doors are closed pending an examination of its affairs and books."

Mr. Harkin made similar statements to other depositors. Proceeding to the City Hall, Mr. Flynn made arrangements to demand payment of the money from the bonding companies which were the guarantors of the deposits.

But more had happened to shut the doors of the Lorimer institution than the mere formal demand for the city funds. For the last three weeks a constantly growing stream of depositors had been trailing through the front doors, at La Salle and Quincy Streets, demanding their money. Day after day money poured out of the bank instead of into it.

Woman's Suit Starts Run.

The start of this run on the bank came about the time when a few depositors learned of an impending suit against State Treasurer James J. Brady by the woman, who is his wife under the laws of Michigan, but not his wife under the laws of Illinois.

Suddenly news of the woman's suit was published in the newspapers and Brady's alleged connections with the Lorimer La Salle Street Bank gained added publicity. The suspicion that Brady had unsecured or inadequately secured loans in the Lorimer Bank added further to the spirit of panic among the depositors who heard and read the story with its many attendant rumors.

In the last three weeks deposits to the amount of $1,500,000 have been withdrawn from the La Salle Street Bank, and Thomas McDonald, Treasurer as well as a Director of the institution, announced yesterday afternoon to the Bank Examiner that the concern's books showed that it owed $3,900,000 to depositors, which could not be paid at once.

Mr. Harkin then demanded that the bank have $1,000,000 on hand at 9 o'clock this morning for the opening with which to meet any further demands of depositors. This demand only served to complete the doom of the bank.

The commission firm of Sidney Long & Co. failed to meet its obligations after the banks closed. Notice posted on the Chicago Board of Trade that this concern had failed to pay its debit balance at the Clearing House, caused much excitement among traders, following, as it did, the news of the closing of the Lorimer Banks.

Chicago's bank Presidents—the men at the head of the city's soundest institutions—viewed the Lorimer bank crisis with calmness. It caused them no anxiety, they said, because it was a situation which could not possibly affect the general banking situation. In the opinion of financial chiefs, the closing of the Lorimer banks is to be regarded as a passing event. The four institutions were not members of the Clearing House Association and had no connection with other banks, except regular commercial accounts carried in one of them.

The Ashland-Twelfth Street State Bank was the centre of a riot when its depositors learned of its closing. Men and women clamored for their money. Refusal was met by excited cries, a stone was thrown through a window, and a rush was made on the locked door. The police drove the crowd away.

The companies guaranteeing the city deposits and the respective bonds are: Illinois Surety Company, $150,000; National Surety Company, $305,000; Globe Surety Company, $125,000; United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company, $100,000; Southern Surety Company, $100,000; Chicago Bonding Company, $50,000; Maryland Fidelity and Indemnity Company, $75,000; Massachusetts Bonding and Indemnity Company, $100,000; Equitable Surety Company of St. Louis, $25,000, and the New England Surety Company, $20,000.

The exact total of the city's deposits in the four banks is $965,000, subdivided as follows:

Broadway State Bank	100,000
Ashland State Bank	100,000
Illinois State Bank	115,000
Total	$965,000

The Garfield National Bank has been the New York correspondent of the La Salle Street Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago for several years. An officer of the Garfield National said yesterday that the Chicago institution had done little business in this city recently. Its balance here, he said, did not amount to more than a few hundred dollars.

W. B. ATWATER BANKRUPT.

Husband of Senator Platt's Widow Files a Petition.

William B. Atwater of Central Valley, Orange County, N. Y., formerly a livery stable proprietor, but now a professional aviator, who came into prominence in November, 1911, when his marriage to Mrs. Lillian Janeway Platt, widow of United States Senator Thomas C. Platt, was announced, has filed a petition in bankruptcy. He gave his liabilities as $4,887 and his assets as $1,665. His creditors are relatives for the most part. The Curtiss Aeroplane Company of Hammondsport has a judgment against him for $125.

The former Mrs. Platt met Atwater while he was in the automobile business. He is her fourth husband.

FRICK SEES BETTER TIMES

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, June 12.—Henry C. Frick, who spent yesterday in Pittsburgh, was interviewed before his departure for New York last night and expressed the opinion that the financial situation in the country was sound. "There is nothing to be enthusiastic about just now," said Mr. Frick, in speaking of the business situation, "but sentiment is growing better and business is picking up gradually."

Mr. Frick expressed the opinion that the railroads were entitled to more than the five per cent. increase in freight rates asked of the Interstate Commerce Commission. He regards the Commission as being dilatory in rendering a decision on the application for the increase and said that the settling of the rate cases and the ending the Mexican trouble would do a great deal for the advancement of business.

Mr. Frick criticised the new tariff law and the general attitude of the national administration toward "big business." He regards President Wilson as an admirable man personally, but not practical enough for the Presidency. "I look for a great landslide for the Republicans in 1916," said Mr. Frick, "and I should like to see the Republicans get control of the Senate in the next election."

Extravagance was condemned by Mr. Frick. "Why," said he, "take for example the great number of automobiles. Fourteen years ago I was the only person in Pittsburgh to get an automobile; now the streets are filled with them."

Again referring to the administration's attitude toward business and the wealthy men of the country, Mr. Frick said with emphasis: "Men like John D. Rockefeller are a great benefit to this country. They are men who do things and have done great things to make this country prosperous."

400-MILE TRIP IN VAIN.

Board of Education Amends By-Laws to Get a Summer Quorum.

The Board of Education at its meeting last Wednesday amended its by-laws so that, instead of its Executive Committee, fifteen members of the board shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of administrative business between July 15 and the second Wednesday in September. It has been the custom of the board not to hold meetings during the vacation season, but to empower its Executive Committee to transact for it certain administrative business.

It has been found practically impossible, however, to get a quorum of the Executive Committee's members at some of its stated meetings, and that is why the board will now try the plan of a quorum of fifteen to attend to such matters as may properly come before it.

In the debate on the question Morton Stein, Chairman of the Committee on By-Laws and Legislation, said that a member of the Executive Committee had come a distance of 400 miles last Summer for the express purpose of attending one of its stated meetings, but had been unable to get a quorum. It so happened that at that very time, Mr. Stein said, there were in the building nineteen or more members of the board attending other committee meetings, but they were not members of the Executive Committee.

Mr. Stein did not mention the name of the member who had taken the long journey in vain. When asked yesterday to whom he referred, he replied that it was Mr. Churchill, who, as President of the Board of Education, is ex officio Chairman of the Executive Committee. Mr. Stein said Mr. Churchill had come all the way from Cliff Dwellers' Upper Lake Champlain, for the sole purpose of attending the meeting for which a quorum could not be obtained. He added that Gen. George W. Wingate, another member of the Executive Committee, had had a similar experience when he came to New York from his country place in the upper part of New York State.

Mr. Stein is hopeful that, now that the board itself and not the Executive Committee will hold the meetings in Summer, there will be enough members in the building or in the city who can be brought together to form the necessary quorum of fifteen.

FIELD WORK FOR ARTILLERY.

Glynn Accepts Federal Offer of Camps for State Troops.

Gov. Glynn has accepted the invitation of the War Department to send ten batteries of field artillery in this city and two up-State to the Government Camp in Instruction for Field Artillery at Tobyhanna, Penn. Col. R. F. Walton, in charge of the National Guard headquarters here, was much pleased by the invitation, which he said would solve the problem of giving this branch of the service field work notwithstanding the limited appropriation voted by the last Legislature.

The encampment, which will last ten days, will be almost entirely at the expense of the Government. It will not be necessary even to transport field equipment to the camp as the State troops will use the guns of a battalion of regulars now on the march from Washington, D. C., to the camp in the wilds of Pennsylvania. The guard will supply its own ammunition, sending 250 rounds of schrapnel for each battery.

The first of the State troops to go into camp will be the First Battalion of the Second Field Artillery, of Brooklyn, in charge of Col. George A. Wingate. They will be in camp from July 16 to July 26. Then the Second Battalion of the Second Field Artillery, in charge of Major Berry, will depart on Aug. 2. The Second Battalion of the First Field Artillery, in charge of Col. H. H. Rogers, will begin a ten-day encampment.

"MOVIES" FOR CHURCHES.

Ministers Form a Corporation to Supply Religious Films.

An organization called The Church and School Social Service Corporation has been formed for presenting moving pictures of a religious or educational nature for the use of churches, schools, social settlements, and other similar institutions. The officers are the Rev. William Carter, President; the Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst, Vice President; S. S. McClure, Secretary, and Henry Clews, Treasurer. An assistant manager of one of the large film exchanges has been selected as general manager of the organization, which has been perfected by the Rev. William Carter. Offices have been opened at 18 East Forty-first Street.

An advisory board has been appointed, its members including prominent churchmen and educators of New York and elsewhere. The plan is to take pictures of the Holy Land and the mission fields, together with educational and sociological subjects here and abroad, and suply them to the institutions intended to be served at a cost lower than the regular prices of the commercial companies.

GETS $25,000 DAMAGES.

Jury Finds for Plumber Who Fell Down Elevator Shaft.

A jury in the Bronx County Supreme Court returned a verdict yesterday of $25,000 in favor of Charles Dobler, a plumber, of 401 East 134th Street. Dobler sued Conron Brothers, owners of a storage plant at Thirteenth Street and Tenth Avenue, for $100,000, accusing them of not properly protecting the entrance to an elevator shaft, into which he fell. His back and a leg were broken. He is partially paralyzed and will be a cripple as long as he lives.

Before rendering its verdict, the jury inspected the scene of the accident and found that it was poorly lighted. Forecaster Scarr of the local branch of the Weather Bureau testified that the day of the accident it was dark and cloudy, with alternate rain and snow. A motion to set aside the verdict was denied by Justice Brady, who said that it was just.

WILL INVESTIGATE CORONERS' OFFICE

Commissioner of Accounts Ordered to Make an Inquiry by Mayor Mitchel.

ASKED FOR BY CITY CLUB

May Prove of Positive Constructive Value, Says Secretary Binkerd—President Feinberg Defends Board.

The City Club, through its Secretary, Robert S. Binkerd, sent a letter to Mayor Mitchel yesterday asking that the Commissioner of Accounts be directed to make an investigation of the Coroners' Office. Secretary Binkerd stated that serious charges had been made affecting the efficiency and integrity of some of the Coroners during the trial of Dr. Otto H. Schultze, physician to Coroner Riordan, and that an investigation might be of positive constructive value. As soon as the Mayor received the letter he ordered the Commissioner of Accounts to begin the investigation. In his letter, Secretary Binkerd said:

"We respectfully urge the importance of an independent official investigation of the Coroners' Office throughout the city, and suggest that the Commissioner of Accounts be directed to make such an investigation. We have material and information in our possession which we should be glad to lay before the Commissioner, and we would otherwise cooperate in any way desired.

"Aside from any cases of dereliction of duty by present or past officials, there is reason to believe that the present charter organization of the Coroners' Office does not make for efficient administration. Practically every proposal for charter revision in recent years has contained substantial changes with regard to this department, but the facts concerning it under present conditions have not been ascertained or analyzed. The proposed investigation may, therefore, be of positive constructive value."

When informed of the letter, Coroner Feinberg, President of the Board of Coroners, said:

"There is nothing new in the letter in the first place. Those kind of attacks have been made for a great many years upon the Coroners. They go back long before the present board existed. They have gone to the Legislature and the Commissioner of Accounts before, and during the past year the Commissioner of Accounts made an investigation.

"The District Attorney's Office has been informed at various times of alleged dereliction of duty by the Coroners, and it has made an investigation of its own, but in not a single instance have any of the charges been substantiated. Now, if the City Club thinks it has anything new, except what Dr. Schultze put in as part of his defense, I will be glad to assist the Mayor in finding out all about it.

"If, after a careful consideration of all the facts, a better way can be found to perform the work for which the Coroners' Office exists, I will gladly assist in bringing about a change, and am sure the other members of the board will do the same. It must not be forgotten, however, that giving old things new names does not accomplish anything, and merely changing the name of the office does not make the officials any better. I will do everything in my power to help along the investigation."

THE USE OF FERTILIZERS.

Increasing Amount of the Various Kinds in the Country.

That American farmers are using constantly increasing quantities of fertilizers is evident both from the rapidly growing production of soil foods in the United States and from the marked importations of that class. Statistics on this subject were made public yesterday by the Department of Commerce.

The domestic manufacture of fertilizers, for example, as reported by the Bureau of the Census in 1909, amounted to $104,000,000, or nearly double the total reported for 1904. Of phosphate rock, the domestic production has doubled since 1902, the total for 1912, according to the United States Geological Survey, being about 3,000,000 tons, of which 1,000,000 tons were exported. Of cottonseed oil cake about one-fourth of the total consumption of 1,500,000 tons is used for fertilizer purposes, recent estimates placing the value of the oil cake thus employed, without first feeding it to animals, at from $6,000,000 to $8,000,000 per annum. The domestic production of sulphur, which yields sulphuric acid, an important material in the manufacture of fertilizers, has increased enormously in recent years, from 3,147 long tons in 1900 to 303,472 tons in 1912, exclusive of about 350,000 tons of pyrites, also a source of sulphuric acid. About 90 per cent. of all the sulphuric acid made in this country is used in the preparation of superphosphates and other artificial fertilizers.

Imports of fertilizer materials have also increased, data compiled by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Department of Commerce, for the period ended with April, 1914, indicating greatly enlarged arrivals of nitrates, potash salts, and other similar materials. The important exceptions relate to those articles, the domestic production of which has so increased as to obviate the necessity of large importations, as in the case of phosphates, and to those, the supply of which has diminished, as in the case of guano, formerly abundant in South America, South Africa, and certain Pacific islands, but yearly becoming more scarce as an article of commerce.

Nitrate of soda ranks first in value of imports of fertilizer materials, the total imports in the last fiscal year having exceeded a half million tons, valued at over $20,000,000. About 15 per cent. of this is used for fertilizer. Of sulphate of ammonia, the imports increased from 15,000 tons in 1908 to 55,000 tons, valued at nearly $4,000,000 in 1913, and in the July-April period of the current year have already reached 71,000 tons. We also imported 15,000 tons of calcium cyanamid, popularly known as "air-nitrogen compound."

FIRST EDITIONS TO BE SOLD.

British and American Authors Represented in the List.

A sale of first editions of British and American authors will be held at Merwin's on Tuesday. Among those represented will be T. B. Aldrich, J. F. Cooper, Charles Dickens, Fitz Greene Halleck, Bret Harte, Nathaniel Hawthorne, Lafcadio Hearn, Washington Irving, H. W. Longfellow, George Meredith, R. L. Stevenson, A. C. Swinburne, H. D. Thoreau, and J. G. Whittier.

While there are no high-priced rarities, there are some scarce and interesting items. "La Cuisine Creole" is an early work of Hearn's, which is scarce because a large part of the edition was destroyed. "The Case of Gen'l Ople and Lady Camper," 12mo, original wrappers, New York, is the original first edition in book form of George Meredith's story. "The Black Arrow," 12mo, New York, 1888, is the genuine first edition of R. L. Stevenson's work, dated Saranac Lake, April 8, 1888, and published some time previous to the London edition.

"Battle of Young's Branch, or Manassas Plain," by T. B. Wardner and J. M. Catlett, Richmond, 1861, is a scarce Confederate item. A book of manuscript notes and exercises was written by John Woodbridge when he was a student at Harvard College in 1710.

There are also some interesting items of Lincolniana and early American periodicals.

Withdrawal of Worsteds.

The withdrawal by the American Woolen Company of its line of staple lightweight worsteds following a similar withdrawal of 1302, will mean an increased slackness in the piece-goods market. Buyers will not want to give orders on fabrics competing with the above until they are sure of the prices at which these cloths will be offered for the Spring.

***

Shadow Flouncings Eagerly Sought.

There has been an excellent call for shadow flouncings in the 18 and 24 inch widths in this market in the last week or ten days, despite reports that had been circulated to the effect that the call for these goods was on the wane. Shadow laces in 6 and 8 inch widths are also much in demand. So good has the call been of late for shadow laces generally that a scarcity of them is predicted for July. Oriental effects are also very good. Much is expected of Bretonne nets, both for Summer and Fall.

Guessing on the Styles.

Although the Spring openings in the men's wear primary market are some weeks off and little can be ascertained regarding the styles that will be offered, there seems to exist a feeling that next season should see gray strongly featured. A similar sentiment is manifested for twists. Following the success attained by Tartan checks, some factors are inclined to believe that the future will show a variation on this style after the order of plaids in large effects. Pencil and pin stripes have had a long run of popularity and it is doubtful if they will go very strongly next season.

More Complaints of Piracy.

There seems to be no end to the complaints that are heard in the ready-to-wear trade concerning the pirating of the styles put out by the leading houses. So soon are they snapped up by the "pirates," it is said, that it often happens that a suit, coat, or dress will lose 50 per cent. of its wholesale value while orders calling for it are being made up. Realizing that it can get no legal protection for its models, one of the most prominent houses in the dress field has stopped making deliveries earlier than Aug. 15, and, in some cases, Sept. 1, on Fall offerings. This plan has been very successful so far, it is said.

Silk Hosiery Returns Growing.

So rapid has been the increase in returns of silk hosiery to wholesale distributers of late that these merchants are getting very worried. According to one big man in the market, the retailers seem to be selling these goods with the same sort of a guarantee that is given with silk gloves, despite the fact that the wholesaler does not guarantee to make good the losses sustained by the retailers in taking back silk hose that has failed to wear more than a month or two, regardless of the strain put on them. The returns are said to be many times as heavy now as they were a year ago, and it will not be long, it is intimated, before the wholesalers will call a halt.

Millinery Season Ending.

The wholesale Spring millinery season is rapidly drawing to a close, and a good part of the trade is boxing up the samples they have been showing. At the present moment business is hardly more than fair, with the demand for white goods overshadowing everything else. White straw shapes are in excellent demand, as are white felt shapes faced with straw. Narrow brims and high crowns lead. The felt shapes are much used for the Summer resorts. White ribbons, particularly in moire, white flowers, white foliage, and white trimmings, generally dominate the call for garnitures. The only color that is showing more than a shadow of a demand is pink.

Some Printcloth Prices Shaded.

Business continued light in the local gray goods market yesterday, and as a result prices broke slightly on the two constructions of printcloths on which the day's largest trading was done. These were 38½-inch. 64-60s, which sold for nearby delivery at 5 cents, and 64-52s in the same width, which sold at 4¾ cents. Both of these figures show a drop of a sixteenth of a cent a yard from Thursday's prices. There was some trading in these goods by second hands at the new figures. There was also some buying of 38½-inch 60-48s, and while there were rumors of sales by second hands at 4⅝ cents, the mills were firm generally in their demands for 4 7-16 cents. At 4 9-16 cents 38½-inch 80-52s were well held. Sheetings and drills were quiet generally, but firm.

Playing One Against Another.

The dating evil, which is a much discussed question in credit circles at the present time, owes its existence in good measure to the lack of organized effort to remove it. With the inauguration of a movement to unite the credit men as a division of the Silk Association of America, a big step has been taken towards the elimination of this abuse. Manufacturers and retailers have gone from one commission house to another using one set of terms to lower the next man's. The datings given by a house are rarely uniform and the credit man passes upon nothing but the financial responsibility of the account. If the latter is in a sound condition nothing is thought of altering regular terms to suit the desires of that account. With a credit men's association in the silk trade, there should develop a greater standardization of terms and one concern will not be placed at a disadvantage with another in giving datings.

Want College Men to Train.

Considerable interest has been created in the local clothing trade by the advertisement of Henry Sonneborn & Co., a Baltimore clothing firm, for college graduates to learn the manufacturing business and to train for positions as executive heads of the concern. Arthur M. Fields, a representative of the firm, was at the Waldorf-Astoria yesterday to interview candidates for the positions. According to Mr. Fields it is the intention of the company to promote the men it accepts from department to department as fast as details are mastered and to pay them a living wage while this process of education is in operation. There were a number of applicants. Mr. Field will also be at the Waldorf today. In trade opinion the venture of the Sonneborn Company bears out the contention that trained minds are needed in responsible positions today in the clothing field as well as in other lines.

Imports of a Week.

Imports of general merchandise, including dry goods, here in the week ended June 6 were valued at $19,904,069, compared with $19,012,750 the week before and $22,343,277 the week before that. Included in these imports are $581,631 worth of jewelry, precious stones, and watches. Imports of leather, hides, &c., were $2,006,207, and of coffee $2,026,816. India rubber, substitutes, manufactures, waste, &c., had a value of $1,320,886. Watching for Undervaluations.

Special agents of the Treasury Department are to have a larger share in running down undervaluations in imported merchandise as the result of an order received yesterday by John K. Sague, Appraiser of the Port. The department instructs the Appraiser to forward to the local bureau of the agents full reports and detailed information affecting all advances over invoice or entered values made on imported goods. The data to be supplied the special agents will, it is expected by the Treasury officials, result in a better watch being kept on the transactions of importers in general and dishonest importers in particular. Merchants who had heard of the new order yesterday said they feared a renewal of the activities of the agents in walking into offices and demanding access to books and private papers on the slightest pretext. Following complaints along this line several years ago the activities of the agents in this direction were curtailed considerably by order of the department.

How Salesmen Vote in Auckland.

Archie Foise, President of the Associated Traveling Salesmen of New York, has just received a letter from G. M. Fowlds of George Fowlds, Limited, Auckland, New Zealand, telling of the system employed in that country for letting salesmen vote when away from home. According to the Auckland system, when a person who has been duly qualified and registered on the roll of any district expects to be away from his home district at the time of election all he does is to go to the returning officer and get a signed "absent voter's permit." This permit will allow the salesman to vote at any polling booth or Post Office in New Zealand. These votes are then posted back to the district to which they belong. In Australia they have, according to Mr. Fowlds, somewhat similar facilities called "postal voting." According to Leon Meyer, who is a leading spirit in the "Votes for Salesmen" movement, Theodore Roosevelt is taking an active interest in it. In a recent letter he asked Mr. Meyer to report the situation to him when he returns from Europe, promising to take up the "Big Stick" actively in support of the movement later on.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Prices Harden—Dealings a Little More Active—Improvement in Trade.

Prices strengthened on the Stock Exchange yesterday in a market which was a little more active than those of recent days. The volume of dealings showed the traders were still feeling a good deal of reserve about entering into fresh commitments, but, on the other hand, the renewed strength gave evidence of the favorable expectation with which the financial community is looking forward to the coming rate decision. This seems likely to continue the foremost topic of market discussion until it is handed down. Yesterday's reports from Washington were that the commission's ruling would be announced on Monday. While still lacking definite information on this score, the Street felt confident that this important news would be had in a very few days.

The gold movement continued, with another engagement of $2,000,000, and tentative arrangements were made for further shipments next week. The banks seem again to have gained cash from the interior on a large scale, and this is expected to keep down the cash loss in today's bank statement, growing out of the large exports of gold. Notwithstanding the gold outflow and the expected falling off in cash in consequence of it, the call money market yesterday remained very easy. Loans were renewed at 1¾ per cent., and once again the day's maximum was 2 per cent. The gold exports have exerted no pressure upon the money market so far because of the very abundant surplus which the banks have been carrying and which has grown out of the large inflow of currency from the interior.

The fall of the new French Ministry again left it an open question just how soon the French Government's financial plans would be worked out, and this may have some effect upon the gold movement from New York. One theory regarding the outflow has been that it is likely to continue until preparations for the forthcoming French bond issue have been completed. The news of the resignation of the Ribot Ministry followed closely reports from Paris that the Cabinet had decided upon an issue of $180,000,000 25-year 3½ per cent. bonds which it was said would be subject to income tax. Whether this plan will be changed as a result of the new Ministerial crisis remains to be seen. Reports were also in circulation that Brazil had about completed arrangements for a loan of $20,000,000 in Europe. If that were arranged it probably would be under conditions which would tend to stabilize the Brazilian situation, which the European markets have been closely watching.

The trade reviews of the week indicate that trade is showing actual improvement in the districts where the crop prospects at this date are most effective in encouraging business. To this extent at least the improvement in the business situation has passed beyond the stage of a mere betterment in sentiment regarding the future. Further testimony was borne yesterday to the extraordinarily good crop outlook. Any one who assumes that current prospects in this direction will be fulfilled is under necessity to assume that trade will derive great benefit therefrom.

When Money Is a Drug.

The supply of money in the banks for months past has been much greater than the demand warranted, so that borrowers with good credit have been able to get their own terms. It has been possible for corporations to negotiate loans to provide for needs which would ordinarily be covered by security sales. Pending a better market for bonds, the Illinois Central has obtained $3,000,000 from a bank for five months at 3½ per cent. The New York Central recently borrowed $4,000,000 for four months at 4 per cent. A railroad which had in its treasury a small issue of first mortgage bonds constituting a valuable lien on an important part of the system raised money a few days ago by selling the bonds, which mature at the end of another year, on a basis to cost the company less than 4 per cent. The purchaser was willing to take less interest than he could have obtained on a good short-term note in return for the greater measure of security attaching to the bonds. The amount outstanding is so small, and the amount of other securities following the first lien so large, that repayment at the end of the year is as certain as that the railroad will still be in operation at that time.

Preferred Stock for New Haven.

A Boston newspaper has found a simple way for the New Haven to raise money for future needs, through the creation of a $75,000,000 issue of 6 per cent. preferred stock. It is obvious that the New Haven needs a large sum of money, and that it cannot afford to increase its fixed charges just now. The difficulties which suggest themselves in a consideration of a new stock issue are connected with the necessity of getting the approval of the holders of the present outstanding stock, and the problem of selling the new issue if it were approved. In the current year the New Haven is not earning enough to pay interest on its funded debt. Under such conditions the offer of a big block of new 6 per cent. preferred stock would not arouse great enthusiasm.

Expect Another Frisco Default.

When the St. Louis & San Francisco went into a receivership, and for several months afterward, it was never believed by bankers that the refunding mortgage 4s were in danger. There are outstanding $68,577,000 of this issue, and while a protective committee was formed at once, no deposit of bonds was asked for, and the members were confident that interest payments would not be disturbed by the reorganization. It now appears probable that the company will default on this issue on July 1, when a half year's payment is due. The road has earned enough to pay the interest, but the receivers have spent the money on improvements, which was good for the road but inconvenient for the security holders. It is expected that an application will be made to Judge Sanford for an order authorizing the receiver to borrow money to pay the July coupon. At the hearing on the application for a similar order regarding the general liens Judge Sanford made it plain that he had learned through bitter experience with the Wabash, Wabash-Pittsburgh, and other roads that a road might put out more receivers' certificates than it could pay interest on. If he refuses to let the receiver borrow for the July payment on the refunding 4s, it is expected that the protective committee will call for deposits and advance the amount of the half year's interest.

Exchange Bought to Retire Notes.

A factor in establishing foreign exchange rates at the present unusually high level is the purchase of exchange by railroad companies with note issues maturing in June and July. When the notes were sold it was specified that those presented for payment in London on the dates of maturity would be met at fixed exchange rates, in some cases of 4.86⅛. The principal issues are $20,000,000 of the Baltimore & Ohio, which runs out on July 1; $10,000,000 of the Northern Pacific, maturing on July 9, and $20,000,000 of the Southern Pacific, to be paid off on June 15. A large amount of notes were placed as investments on the other side, and the number to be provided for in London has been increased further by purchases here, made for the purpose of shipping to London to realize the profit on the exchange.

Problems for Note Investors.

With sight bills quoted at 4.89, the current rate, there would be a gross profit of 2¼ cents to the pound sterling in taking advantage of a railroad note to be paid off at 4.86⅛. This would amount to a round sum on a big block of notes if there was no qualifying matter in the way of expenses to be considered. The question of the English tax to be met has puzzled many persons expert in dealings in exchange, and has caused prospective purchasers of the notes to hesitate because there seemed to be danger that the possibility of a large profit might be turned into a very small one when all costs were met. In one way of looking at the British law the notes handed in for retirement would have to bear the full internal revenue tax of one-half of 1 per cent. of the face value of the securities. So substantial a drain would call for close figuring on the part of investors. From another angle it was held in some quarters that the nominal receipt tax, provided for debts maturing within a year from the date on which they were contracted, would apply to the railroad notes, and that in this case there would be room for a comfortable profit in transactions involving the notes. The decision will be awaited with much interest in financial circles.

Virginia Debt Certificates.

Another day of extensive trading in Brown Brothers certificates for the Virginia-West Virginia deferred debt brought a fair recovery from Thursday's low price of 50. Sales of $50,000 in the first hour resulted in an advance of ⅛ and thereafter the quotation moved forward to 52⅝. The market for the certificates gave signs in later operations of entering the irregular state which characterized them in the long periods of negotiations between the States for a basis of settling the old obligation.

RESERVE BOARD LIST TO BE FULL MONDAY

President Expected to Nominate E. C. Simmons and Thomas D. Jones.

READY FOR CROP MOVING

Secretary McAdoo Believes Regional Banks Will Be Doing Business by Aug. 1.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—It is understood from an informed source that President Wilson expects to send to the Senate next Monday the names of E. C. Simmons of St. Louis and Thomas D. Jones of Chicago, a well-known lawyer and financial expert, to complete the list of five members of the Reserve Board not filled ex officio. There has been practical certainty about the appointment of Mr. Simmons for some time, but the selection of Mr. Jones, who was a trustee of Princeton and a friend of President Wilson, ends a long period of suspense. It has been thought that Mr. Farwell of Chicago would get the place. Mr. Jones is expected to be governor of the whole system.

The Federal Reserve Board as thus completed will consist of William G. McAdoo of New York, Secretary of the Treasury, and John Skelton Williams of Virginia, Controller of the Currency—both members of the board ex officio—and Thomas B. Jones of Illinois, Paul M. Warburg of New York, W. P. G. Harding of Alabama, A. C. Miller of California, and E. C. Simmons of Missouri. Most of these selections were announced some time ago. Mr. Miller is now Assistant Secretary of the Interior and a recognized economic authority along certain lines.

The three members of the Organization Committee that will yield the reins of the new system to the Federal Reserve Board as soon as the commissions are issued are making strenuous efforts to have the twelve regional reserve banks in working order in time to assist in moving the crops this Fall. Mr. McAdoo has announced that he believes the banks will be ready for business by Aug. 1, and the chosen of the board, on whose shoulders most of the responsibility will rest, is considered a long step forward.

Not until the full board is ready to take up its duties will the first one-sixth of the total assessment levied against member banks be demanded. The rest of the assessment will be collected, as provided by the law, until half has been paid in. The rest is left undemanded until an emergency arises. The supporters of the bill in Congress said repeatedly that it was expected that half of the assessment would never be called for, but would simply give additional security to the regional banks.

Though the Organization Committee has gone far in making arrangements, there will be much for the Federal Reserve Board to do in the way of detail. Subordinate officials will have to be appointed, and the whole machinery started. In the same way the regional banks in the twelve cities will have to engage quarters and a full clerical force before they can really handle business. But as the regional banks will not do a general business with the public, but will confine their activities to member banks, the physical necessities will be largely limited.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 12.—Chicagoans today expressed pleasure when they learned that Thomas D. Jones had practically been chosen as Governor of the Federal Reserve Board.

Mr. Jones refused to discuss his reported selection. At the Onwentsia Club today he said: "I have not had the offer of this position, either officially or unofficially. Consequently there is nothing I can say about it." He would not even admit there had been any communication between the President and himself relative to the appointment.

The prospective Reserve Board member was a senior in Princeton University when the President was a freshman. He did not know Mr. Wilson at that time, but became well acquainted with him later, when the present occupant of the White House was President of Princeton and Mr. Jones was a trustee of that institution. Their friendship has continued. Mr. Wilson was a guest at the Jones home when he was in Chicago, just before he was inaugurated as President.

Mr. Jones was born in Wisconsin, but came to Chicago in 1877 and has made his home here ever since. He was active in the practice of law until 1900, when he retired. He is a member of the Chicago, University, City, and Midday Clubs and never has held a public office. He has no banking affiliations, is an enthusiastic golfer, and is to be seen on the links of the Onwentsia Club almost every day.

PAUL M. WARBURG RESIGNS.

Gives Up Directorship in the Board of Commerce for Reserve Board.

Paul M. Warburg of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. has resigned as a Director of the National Bank of Commerce and will shortly withdraw from the Directorates of several other banking institutions in preparation for his work as a member of the Federal Reserve Board. Mr. Warburg's retirement from the Bank of Commerce was a necessary step to meet the qualifications of the Federal Reserve act, and it was generally expected that he would sever connections with other interests, including the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

It was learned yesterday that no representative of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. will take Mr. Warburg's place on the Bank of Commerce Board of Directors. In all probability the vacancy will not be filled at all, as the bank has forty Directors, and its recent policy has been to reduce the number from time to time.

Mr. Warburg is a Director of the Title Guarantee & Trust Company, the United States Mortgage & Trust Company, and the American Surety Company. His withdrawal from the two institutions first named will probably occur at an early date. It is not known whether he will continue as a Director of the American Surety Company.

PRAISES LAND BANK ACT.

Skinner Tells Loan Association Delegates of Its Great Importance.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, June 12.—Aspects of remedial legislation in connection with the operation of the State Banking Department were set before the delegates of the twenty-seventh annual convention of the New York State League of Savings and Loan Associations at the morning session at the Hotel Statler by George I. Skinner of Albany, First Deputy Superintendent of Banks.

Mr. Skinner told of god results which have followed amendments of the laws permitting the State Banking Department to investigate fraudulent investment companies and fraudulent transactions of all kinds. He told of the introduction of the first anti-loan shark legislation by Ansley Wilcox, of this city, in 1895, and paid tribute to the efforts of the Russell Sage Foundation to fight the usurers.

The Land Bank act, with its healthy influence in wa farming districts, was regarded by the State official as one of the most important laws of the last few years, and he congratulated the delegates on their evident intent to work out the practical details of the new law in a broad-minded fashion.

"Every step in the development of this system should be carefuly and cautiously taken," said Mr. Skinner.

Martin S. Cohn of New York, former First Vice President, was chosen President of the association for the coming year, in place of Walter Scott of Oneonta. The other officers elected were: First Vice President, Clary W. Holmes of Elmira; Second Vice President, James P. Judge of Brooklyn; Third Vice President, Elmer M. Stanton of Troy, and Treasurer, J. H. White of Schenectady.

OPPOSE ANTI-TRUST PLANK.

State Bankers Discuss Change in Directorate Provision.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW LONDON, June 12.—The prohibition of interlocking bank directorates, as proposed in the pending anti-trust legislation at Washington, was discussed briefly at the concluding session of the New York State Bankers' Association here today.

Mark D. Stiles of the Mount Vernon Trust Company brought the subject up, saying that the bill as drawn would make it necessary for four or five Directors of his institution, which is affiliated with the Hanover National Bank in New York, to withdraw, although the present condition involved none of the abuses at which the bill was aimed. He offered resolutions requesting the Senate Committee to eliminate the section and asking Senators Root and O'Gorman to use their efforts to that end.

Some of the other delegates counseled more deliberation and an effort to have the section amended, rather than to make a request of Congress for its entire elimination, which was almost certain to be disregarded. The subject was referred to the Executive Council, with power.

Pierre Jay, Vice President of the Bank of the Manhattan Company, addressed the convention on the new State banking law, explaining in detail the changes that had been made and the new features that had been introduced.

The officers nominated yesterday were unanimously elected, and the convention adjourned.

MR. GIBBONEY EXPLAINS.

Counsel Attended Groups 2 and 3 Meetings by Request.

Stuart G. Gibboney, counsel for the Reserve Bank Organization Committee, explained yesterday how he came to attend the meetings of the bankers in Group 2 and Group 3 of the New York Federal Reserve district at Utica and Albany, to put into nomination other names than those which had been selected by banks of those groups at the previous conference held in New York. His presence was cited by some of the bankers as supporting the view that political influences were being brought to bear upon the selection of these nominees. There was no warrant at all, Mr. Gibbaney said, for any such inference.

In explanation of his participation in these conferences, Mr. Gibboney said:

"As M. C. Elliott, Secretary of the Reserve Organization Committee, had by invitation attended the conference called at the Clearing House in New York on May 22, the Organization Committee, when requested by the bankers calling the conference of Group 2 at Utica and Group 3 at Albany, to send a representative to advise them as to the method of nominating and electing Directors, sent me for that purpose only, Mr. Elliott being ill and unable to go.

"At both meetings I was careful to state that the committee would not take sides with any faction, was not interested in any candidates and only wanted to see that the nomination and election of Directors was carried out according to law. In view of the fact that Messrs. Leggett and Woodard, who, it is intimated, are being supported or encouraged by the Organization Committee, happen to be Republicans, and Messrs. Treman and Locke Democrats, it is very difficult to see how the intimation can be justified that politics is being played, and I personally know that any such charge is absolutely untrue.

"In view of the seeming misconstruction of the Reserve act by some of the papers, it should be said that there can be no 'Regular' or 'Insurgent' nominations, but that all legal nominations must be made by the individual member banks, who then vote for any nominees of their group whom they care to select. It is entirely within the power of the banks constituting each group to select two Directors to represent them on the Board of the Federal Reserve Bank, as it is their duty to do so, free from any alleged coercion or intimidation from Washington, Wall Street, or elsewhere."

PLASTER MODEL DUTY FREE.

It Has Taken Months to Settle This In Mr. Codman's Case.

After a controversy with the local customs officials extending over a period of several months, the Board of United States General Appraisers has decided that Ogden Codman, an architect, of 340 Madison Avenue, is entitled to enter duty free a model made of plaster in the form of a cross-section of a building showing the interior of a portion of two floors of a residence recently completed by Mr. Codman for his occupancy at 7 East Ninety-sixth Street.

Collector Mitchel classified the model as a manufacture of plaster of paris under the old tariff act, and put on a duty at the rate of 35 per cent. ad valuorem. Mr. Codman then appealed to the Board of Appraisers, where his attorneys, Brooks & Brooks, contended that free entry should be given under Paragraph 639, which specifies "models of inventions and of other improvements in the arts to be used exclusively as models and incapable of other uses."

It was shown at the hearing by E. F. Place of the law firm that the model was made in Paris and represents interior work of the eighteenth century period. The model as imported is a true representation of the interior arrangement of a building in France, with the exception that adaptations had to be made to meet elevator requirements in Mr. Codman's house here. In sustaining the importer, Judge Waite says that the article in question is undoubtedly a model illustrating improvement in the arts in so far as it illustrates the use of certain architectural elements rearranged and applied to the construction of a building which is considered to be an improvement on the older style of architecture containing the same elements. It was also shown to the satisfaction of the board that the model is not susceptible of any other use.

BOARD TO RESTRAIN UNFAIR COMPETITION

BUT COURTS WILL DECIDE

Commission Also to Investigate Foreign Trade Practices—Bill to Senate Today.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Power to restrain unfair competition in commerce is conferred upon the proposed Federal trade commission in an amendment adopted by the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce today. The committee also approved an amendment empowering the commission to examine foreign trade practices, and has under consideration an amendment proposed by Senator Gore, Democrat, of Oklahoma, to prevent pipe lines engaging in unfair competition. The two amendments approved today, with whatever changes in the measure are agreed upon at a session of the committee to be held tomorrow morning, will be reported to the Senate tomorrow.

The section agreed upon by the committee relating to unfair trade practices is virtually the same as Sections 10, 11, and 12 of the Stevens bill, which is practically identical with the Clapp measure, pending before the committee for many weeks. The committee struck out the latter part of Section 12 of the Stevens bill providing that in case of the issuance of an injunction against unfair competition the court should have discretion to "issue an order restraining said corporation from engaging in commerce for such time as said court may order." The committee's amendment reads:

Unfair competition in commerce is hereby declared unlawful. The commission is hereby empowered and directed to prevent corporations from using unfair methods of competition in commerce. Whenever the commission shall have reason to believe that any corporation has been or is using any unfair method of competition in commerce it shall issue and serve upon such corporation a written order at least thirty days in advance of the time set therein for hearing, directing it to appear before the commission and show cause why an order shall not be issued by the commission restraining and prohibiting it from using such method of competition, and if upon such hearing the commission shall find that the method of competition in question is prohibited by this act it shall thereupon issue an order restraining and prohibiting the use of the same.

The commission may at any time modify or set aside, in whole or in part, any order issued by it under this act. Whenever the commission, after the issuance of such order, shall find that such corporation has not complied therewith, the commission may petition the district court of the United States, within any district where the method in question was used or where the said corporation is located or conducts business, praying said court to issue an injunction to enforce such order of the commission, and the court is hereby authorized to issue such injunction.

The new setion agreed upon by the committee relating to the investigation of foreign trade conditions is as follows:

The commission is hereby directed to investigate, as expeditiously as may be, trade conditions in foreign countries where associations, combinations, or practies of buyers, dealers, or traders injuriously affect the export trade of the United States, and also to investigate whether American exporters have combined with each other or with foreign producers or dealers to control prices abroad, and to report to Congress thereon from time to time.

The Gore amendment, which was under consideration when the committee adjourned today, reads:

That unfair practices and unfair competition on the part of pipe line companies engaged in the transportation or in the purchase and transportation of gas and oil from one State into or through another State are hereby declared to be unlawful.

The sections of the Stevens bill adopted by the committee today, empowering the committee to enjoin unfair competition, are the most important additions to be made to the Federal Trade Commission bill. What constitutes unfair competition is left finally to the determination of the courts, although the proposed commission has initial power to define in each case what constitutes unfair competition.

"The words 'unfair competition' have a very well defined meaning in the decisions of courts," said Senator Newlands, Democrat, of Nevada, Chairman of the committee, in discussing this amendment. "The meaning of the term is quite as well settled as the meaning of 'reasonable rates' or other like terms. The commission will have the work of the courts to guide it. However, the function given the courts in restraining such competition requires judicial determination in each case."

Senator Newlands said he thought the committee would report no further amendments to the bill at this time.

President Wilson has favored parts of the Stevens bill, and his interest in the matter is presumed to be directly responsible for the action of the committee in deciding to report the amendment. It has both a Democratic and Republican parentage, practically the same amendment included in the Stevens bill being part of a bill introduced by Senator Clapp, Republican, of Minnesota.

Senator Saulsbury, Democrat, of Delaware, hoped to have the committee take up his proposed substitute for the Rayburn Railroad Securities bill, but amendments pertaining directly to the Federal Trade Commission consumed the time of the committee.

If the committee succeeds in confining the Federal Trade Commission bill to its present text plus the proposed amendments, Senator Newlands is hopeful that the bill can be passed by the Senate within a comparatively short time. A feeling is current among Senators, however, that an all-Summer session is ahead and that adjournment will not occur much before Sept. 1.

RECENT FINANCING.

Bethlehem Steel Notes Placed—Union Terminal Syndicate Ends.

A syndicate headed by Hallgarten & Co. has purchased $3,000,000 worth of one year 5 per cent. notes of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation and placed them with investors on a basis to yield 5½ per cent. The proceeds of the issue will be used for general corporate purposes.

The Southern Railway is preparing to continue double-tracking operations toward its Southern terminals, it was learned yesterday, and for this purpose bonds will be sold from time to time. The Atlanta & Charlotte Air Line, a subsidiary of the Southern, has already sold to J. P. Morgan & Co. and Brown Brothers & Co. $5,500,000 worth of thirty year 5 per cent. bonds, but the proceeds will be used to retire a similar amount of other bonds of the company now pledged under the Southern's consolidated mortgage. It is expected that a sale of some of the Southern's consolidated mortgage bonds will be made soon to pay for double-tracking.

William Salomon & Co. announced yesterday that $2,193,000 worth of 5 per cent. first mortgage bonds of the Union Terminal Company had been sold and the syndicate dissolved which underwrote them. An offering of equipment trust certificates of 1913 of the New York Central is expected next week. The amount remaining unissued is about $4,000,000.

GOLD SHIPMENTS INCREASED

Goldman, Sachs & Co. to Send $1,000,000 to Paris on Tuesday.

The amount of gold to be taken from this city to Paris on the Oceanic today was increased by $2,000,000 through the withdrawal from the Sub-Treasury yesterday of this amount in coin by the Hanover National Bank and the banking firm of Bernhard Scholle & Co., each taking $1,000,000. Counting the previous shipments since Monday, $19,700,000 will have gone this week, making by a wide margin the heaviest exports of gold from New York for any single week.

Bankers interested in the movement said yesterday that an order sent out by the Treasury Department restricting the amount of double eagles to be released for export would not have any material effect on future transfers. The Treasury made a ruling that engagements should be equally divided between the coins, because the drain on the supply of gold had made heavy inroads on $20 gold pieces, and it was thought best to conserve resources. The double eagle is preferred in export operations because abrasion is only about half as great as in case of the eagle.

Since the outward flow of gold began at the end of June the Sub-Treasury's holdings have been drawn down to a point where there is possibility of a call upon the Treasury for more supplies. When the export movement started the Sub-Treasury had about $60,000,000, and already more than $32,000,000 has been taken, the rest of the $36,700,000 being in bars. There is no question about plenty of the metal being available at any time, for in addition to the $1,127,768,000 standing back of gold certificates, the Treasury has $818,490,000 additional gold coin and $249,278,000 in bullion stored away. About $300,000,000 of this is at Philadelphia, with other huge amounts at Denver, San Francisco, and at Washington. Exports of the metal will be renewed early next week. Goldman, Sachs & Co. expect to send $1,000,000 to Paris on Tuesday, and other banking houses are arranging for consignments.

AUTHORIZE SUBWAY ROUTE.

Board Approves Spruce St. Alternative—Easement Before McAdoo.

The Board of Estimate yesterday authorized the laying out of the route for the Park Place-William Street route by Spruce Street. This is the alternative proposed by the Public Service Commission in consequence of the difficulty of coming to an agreement with Secretary McAdoo with regard to the easement under the Post Office, which is necessary if the Beekman Street line is to be followed.

The commission has not by any means given up hope of reaching a settlement with Mr. McAdoo, but thought that for safety's sake it must go on with the legalization of the alternative.

The real estate experts of the commission and Mr. McAdoo have met and come to a tentative agreement as to the terms on which the Post Office easement should be granted to the city, and Assistant Counsel Leroy T. Harkness of the commission and Assisatnt District Attorney Knox have also finished the draft of deed containing the terms of the agreement between the city and the Federal Government. All the documents in the case have now been sent to Mr. McAdoo, and no announcement of the exact conditions of the bargain will be made until he has approved them.

The Public Service Commission yesterday granted to the Rapid Transit Subway Construction Company, the Interborough subsidiary, the contract for the connection between the Seventh Avenue subway and the old subway at the Battery, which is known as Section A. The amount bid by the company was $474,244.

Bids were also opened yesterday by the commission for Section 7 of the Lexington Avenue subway, from Forty-third Street to Forty-third Street, where the diagonal connection with the Park Avenue subway turns out of Lexington Avenue. For this also the Rapid Transit Subway Construction Company was the lowest bidder, with $1,915,164, the next being the MacArthur Brothers Company, with $2,023,000. The contract is almost certain to be let to the Interborough subsidiary, which has this importance that it will place it in a strong position to bid for the delicate work of constructing the diagonal connection with the old subway line.

REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION.

STRANGE AS IT MAY SEEM
It Took Foresight and Imagination
To Buy Manhattan Island for $24
—Are You Reading Chapter by Chapter?

The STORY of JUNE 23rd

CHAPTER V
WHAT MAKES THE VALUE OF REAL ESTATE

AS you probably know, Manhattan Island was bought from the Indians for $24 worth of "Junk."

That "Deal" in Real Estate set an example to Investors in New York Real Estate "unto the Third and Fourth Generation."

For instance, the corner of Broadway and 59th Street sold at Auction for $875. It is worth today $300,000 to $400,000. Why is it worth that money? Because it's a corner on Broadway opposite to the Entrance to Central Park.

ON JUNE 23rd there are going to be sold at Auction several lots that in time will be even more valuable than the 59th Street corner—and that's no joke, because they're not alone at the ONLY BROADWAY ENTRANCE to the Great City of New York—Broadway, the Main Artery of that City—the Greatest Street In The World—but also at what will be the entrance to Van Cortlandt Park.

If the City Planning is carried out consistently, here will be a Grand Plaza worthy of the Entrance to the Great Metropolis—combined with the Entrance to the Second Largest Park in that Metropolis.

Into that Plaza will run—probably—a Van Cortlandt Park North, similar to a Central Park South—262d Street—the most northerly street in the city, which connects Riverdale Avenue with Broadway—also Caryl Avenue, on which, 430 yards distant, is the Caryl Station—and other streets and avenues.

Why—if this spot was in any European City there would be four Arcs de Triumph—18 Statues of Heroes—two Tombs of Napoleon and a charge of two cents for every bunch of radishes brought into the City.

This Plaza, besides being the Gateway to the City and the Park, will form the center of the activities of that part of the City and Yonkers, and should be a Columbus Circle, a 5th Avenue and 59th Street, a Times Square, a Herald Square—all combined.

What will these lots then be worth? Could you duplicate them in any other City in the World?

Surrounding lots should share in these values. That's why you should go and look at this property—that is what makes it interesting—THERE'S BIG MONEY TO BE MADE THERE if you only have foresight and imagination enough to see its tremendous future possibilities. Be sure to read Chapter VI tomorrow.

THE CIVIL SERVICE.

City.

These reports of First Ass't Chief Examiner Murray have been approved: Recommending that the commission grant the request of the Dept. of Health that examinations be ordered for promotion to the newly established positions of Director of the Bureau of Infectious Diseases and Director of the Bureau of Child Hygiene, with salaries of $6,000 a year, and that they be open to all Assistant Sanitary Superintendents, Grade 5, and all Medical Inspectors, Grades 4 and 5, who shall have served at least one year and who are otherwise eligible for examination.

Relative to the communication from the Certification Clerk stating that there is a preferred list in existence for Ass't Engineer, Designer, Grade D, containing the name of a person suspended Dec. 31, 1913, by the Dept. of Water Supply; also a preferred list for Ass't Engineer in charge of section, Board of Water Supply, containing the names of two persons suspended Dec. 31, 1913, from that Dept. and requesting information as to whether the three names may be certified to the Board of Water Supply from which to appoint an Ass't Engineer, Grade C, Mr. Murray says that, in his opinion, the names of these persons should be certified for any position of Ass't Engineer for their appropriate grades.

Relative to the request of Thomas B. Higgins that the list of Civil Service Examiner be certified as appropriate from which to make appointments to the position of Salary and Grade Examiner, Mr. Murray says the training and experience required for the two positions are radically different and such certification would not be appropriate.

President Henry Moskowitz is attending a three days' convention at Pueblo, Col., of the National Assembly of Civil Service Commissioners.

United States.

An examination for ass't epidemiologist, for men only, will be held on July 6 to fill vacancies in the Public Health Service, at from $2,000 to $2,500 a year. Competitors will not be assembled for examination, but will be rated on general education and medical training, laboratory experience, experience in epidemiological work, and publications or theses. Applicants must have reached their 23d but not their 40th birthday on the date of the examination. Further information may be obtained from the commission, Washington, D. C.

EDUCATION NOTES.

The next meeting of the Board of Education will be on June 24.

The salary of the Director of Reference and Research is fixed at $6,500 a year, and the salary of the Assistant Director at $4,000; the salary of the Director of Attendance is fixed at $6,000, or $500 less than the Reference Director, while the Assistant Director of Attendance is to receive $4,500, or $500 more than the Assistant Reference Director. There has been no explanation of this seeming inconsistency.

Edward C. Zabriskie, Principal of Public School 27, has been selected as a member of the Special Committee on Education, Libraries, and Museums of the City's Committee on the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

The terms of office of Associate City Supts. John H. Haaren and Andrew W. Edson will expire, respectively, on June 30 and Sept. 23. Their successors will be elected probably at the next meeting of the Board of Education.

City Supt. Maxwell's term of office will expire on March 14, 1916.

About 1,140 candidates for license have taken the examinat'on held this week at the Education Board Hall. The results will be made known some time in July. Appointments from this eligible list will probably not be made until November.

Frederick W. Mar, Principal of Public School 108, Brooklyn, has been elected to the vacancy in the Teachers' Advisory Council, caused by the recent death of Principal William J. Morrison.

As Flag Day this year falls on a Sunday, the event will be celebrated in the public schools next Monday.

STORE HEADS HEARD AT INDUSTRY INQUIRY

Employes Can Always Have Grievances Listened To, Two Managers Testify.

WAGES HALF OF EXPENSE

Fine Work by Retail Dry Goods Association—54-Hour Law Violations Charged.

With testimony from the managers of several department stores and an exposition of the object and achievements of the Retail Dry Goods Association, the Federal Commission on Industrial Relations concluded for the time being yesterday its hearings in this c[illegible]. On Monday it will reassemble in Paterson, N. J., where it will inquire into the conditions which led to the recent labor troubles there. It will return here for further hearings probably in the Fall.

Leslie Graff, assistant manager of B. Altman & Co., was again called to the stand and told of the work of the Retail Dry Goods Association, of which he was for eight years the secretary. He spoke of its civic work as supporting the extension of the Subway system, the laying of a network of high pressure water pipes for fire fighting, and the establishment of the parcel post, and then he outlined its activities with relation to the records of the employes.

It has eighteen members and each of them is required to furnish the association with complete particulars as to the hiring and discharge of every employe. This was not in any way a blacklist, Mr. Graff insisted, and if the employes had no opportunity to lead their cases with the association, they could approach the managers of their own stores. Thus of Altman's store he said:

"Figuratively and literally there are no doors to President Michael Friedsam's office. I doubt if there is even an office boy he does not know by name. He is deeply interested in each employe, and since he is one himself no dismissal comes without his personal perusal of the case."

To illustrate the value of the Retail Dry Goods Association's work, Mr. Graff said:

"It often occurs that the police are able to find missing persons and to trace crooks through its files. Many of them when they first come to New York at once seek employment in a department store."

Mutual Benefit Work.

Describing the mutual benefit work at Altman's Mr. Graff stated that under the will of Benjamin Altman all of the 400 employes who had been in the store fifteen years were remembered, and $1,800,000 was distributed among them. The Mutual Benefit Association is entirely voluntary, and under it sick benefits of from $6 to $12 a week are paid and a death benefit of $125. It had $80,000 on hand today, and had paid out since the beginning of the year $7,500. Mr. Altman, besides contributing during his lifetime, had left the association $50,000.

Wilson Hatch Tucker, manager of Lord & Taylor's since 1910, told of a physical examination which applicants for jobs are required to undergo. In this way about 11½ per cent. are weeded out. The firm employs three physicians to look after its employes, and since Jan. 1 they have treated 4,435 patients, 645 of them being at their homes. At the store there is a nurse in attendance in the hospital, and there is a dental surgery, a gymnasium, and a roof garden for the use of the employes.

"Is there any charge for this welfare work?" Mr. Tucker was asked.

"None," he replied.

"You have the highest paid employes of their sort in the city, have you not?"

"I don't know, but our minimum wage for saleswomen is $9 a week."

Miss Nelle Swartz, Executive Secretary of the New York Consumers' League, gave the result of her observations of the department stores. Ten out of twenty-three, she said, were violating the fifty-four-hour week for women law. In some of the smaller department stores, which employ from ten to fifty hands, she had found employes under 16 working seventy-two hours a week.

James L. Gernon, Director of Mercantile Inspections of the State Department of Labor, did not believe that the unionizing of the employes would help the enforcement of the fifty-four-hour law. He had taken a number of affidavits, he said, from employes complaining of overwork, and then had them deny their statements when subpoenaed before their employers. He found fault with the ventilation and sanitary methods in many of the stores, but said that he had found little evidence of child labor in the larger establishments. There was a good deal of it in the smaller stores, but it was being steadily reduced.

Percy S. Straus Heard.

Percy S. Straus, of R. H. Macy & Co., and President of the Retail Dry Goods Association, was the last of the store proprietors to appear. The lowest wage paid any woman in his store, he said, was $6. The entire force consists of 4,344 men and women, of whom 319 are salesmen and 1,058 saleswomen. Of the women 528 are earning $9 a week or over, 370 less than $9, and 194 less than $8. Of the women of three years' experience only 117 are making less than $9 a week, and 52 less than $8 a week.

In this pay is reckoned a certain amount of commission which every sales person is expected to make above his or her salary. Mr. Straus gave the commission details of the way in which this is calculated by taking a five years' average for each month in the year, and denied that it was ever used as a means of "speeding up" by constantly raising the quantities to be sold before a commission could be claimed.

Speaking of the whole question of pay, Mr. Straus pointed out that salaries form 52 per cent. of the total cost of running a department store, and this he considered a high percentage, in which Commissioner Garretson was not altogether disposed to agree. As to what had been said about the hardship of the dismissal of employes without notice, Mr. Straus quoted statistics to show that a greater number of those hired by Macy's quit of their own accord without giving notice than were dismissed.

Any of his employes could come to him with a grievance, he said, and there were notices posted in the store to that effect, as well as boxes in which suggestions could be dropped.

"They do, in fact, come to me," said the witness. "Every week I have three or four cases. I had one this morning."

"They are not afraid of you?" asked Prof. John R. Commons.

"Oh, no," said Mr. Straus, with a smile. "No one is afraid of me. I really think they would come to me rather than to their immediate superiors."

When the examination turned on the Mutual Benefit Association Mr. Straus interested the commission greatly. He expressed the opinion that the law permitted of mutual benefit associations being compulsory as long as they were not managed by the owners of the stores, but by the members, and said he thought that as the stores had to carry employers' liability insurance, they were entitled to some kind of insurance against sickness. He was not however prepared to formulate his views precisely as yet. Then the question of unionism came up.

Favors the Open Shop.

"When I was at college the professors interested me in trade unionism and I became a union man," Mr. Straus confessed. "Since then I have seen them in practical working and I recognize their difficulties. Theoretically, I am still a union man, but practically I favor the open shop."

Then Mr. Straus told the story of how he had invited Miss Dutcher, the retail clerks' organizer, to hold a meeting of his employes in his own store, and denounced as an utter falsehood the statement that he had said he would discharge anyone who joined a union. He had found, he said, that Miss Dutcher was about to hold a meeting in the street outside Macy's and he thought it much more fitting that it should be held in his auditorium. There was absolutely no idea of espionage in that, he said, but simply that the meeting might take place in reasonable comfort. Then when Miss Dutcher insisted that the meeting must be in Thirty-fifth Street, he told her that that was a mistake as the girls she wished to address came out by Thirty-fourth Street, and he had instructed the Macy wagons to keep out of the way.

With this version of Mr. Straus's conduct Miss Elizabeth Dutcher agreed. She said he had always treated her attempts to unionize with perfect fairness and the only reason she had declined his invitation was because she wished to prevent the employes getting the notion that her efforts had Mr. Straus's sanction.

Miss Dutcher accused Mr. Straus of discharging seventy-five waitresses some years ago on account of their having joined the union that was then forming. Mr. Straus denied that he had any recollection of this. He did remember telling Miss Mary Dreier that he could not permit of union propaganda, although he had no objection to any of his employes belonging to a union.

As the commission adjourned an excited man tried to address it about women and children engaged in hotels and restaurants for over-long hours. He then denounced the Commissioners as farces. Sergeant at Arms Egan and Lieut. William Kennel led him from the room.

Dr. Everett Herrick's Will Disposes of Million-Dollar Estate.

Dr. Everett Herrick, a retired physician, who died on April 1 at his home, 33 East Fifty-first Street, left more than $140,000 to public and charitable institutions. The remainder of his estate, the value of which is said to be more than $1,000,000, was left to his cousins, employes, and friends. He left no nearer relatives.

The charitable bequests were $25,000 to the American Academy of Medicine, to establish the Everett Herrick Library Fund; $25,000 to the same institution, to establish the Everett Herrick General Fund; $25,000 to the New York Skin and Cancer Hospital, $25,000 to the Free Library at Easthampton, L. I.; $10,000 each to the Society for the Relief of Wives and Children of Medical Men, the Children's Aid Society, and the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor; $10,000 and etchings and engravings to Colby Academy at New London, N. H., and $1,000 to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

The largest bequest was one of $150,000 to Marjorie Munroe, who was not related to Dr. Herrick. To three cousins, Jesse, Mary, and William Colby, he left $20,000 each. The other bequests were $32,500 to George E. Munroe, $30,000 to Love Porter, $20,000 each to Dr. Louis F. Bishop, Dr. A. Schuyler Clark, Anna Bishop, and Constance A. Jones; $7,500 each to the Maidstone Golf Club of Easthampton, L. I., and to Herman Schenkel, $5,000 each to Henry L. Hooker and Anna K. Sturges, $2,000 to Grace Porter, $2,000 to Mary McCabe, a servant; $1,000 to John Bryan, $500 each to Elizabeth Rennick and Mary Kelly, and an uncomputed amount to James B. Ford.

UPHOLDS EQUAL RIGHTS LAW

Carmody Orders Prosecution of Hotels That Violate It in "Ads."

ALBANY, June 12.—Acting on complaints that certain hotel proprietors had advertised that only certain races would be admitted to their hotels, Attorney General Carmody recently sent letters to the District Attorneys of various counties, calling upon them to enforce the law prohibiting such discrimination. Among those to whom letters were sent were William D. Cunningham, District Attorney of Ulster County, and Fred M. LaDuke of Essex County. In a letter to Mr. Carmody, Mr. Cunningham says that he knows nothing of the advertisements complained of, and adds: "If I am to act upon this complaint, I must necessarily have some detailed information regarding it. Please state in what paper and what issue this advertisement appeared."

"I do not know," said Mr. Carmody's letter of reply, "in what newspaper the advertisement appeared. My purpose in calling your attention to it was that you might ascertain whether or not the place named was soliciting patronage contrary to law. If it is, there must be other evidence of it, aside from the advertisement. I assume you will regard it as your duty to see whether or not it is a fact."

Under the equal rights law, which passed the Legislature last year, advertisements indicating that certain classes and races are to be excluded constitute the same crime as the actual exclusion.

WROTE NEW HAVEN HE'D BLOW UP TRAIN

MOTHER TAKES IN WASHING

Father Was a Patchogue Indian—Young Joseph Cress In Hackensack Jail to be Extradited.

Joseph Criss, the nineteen-year-old boy of Indian and negro parentage who, after threatening to dynamite a Cunard liner in midocean unless $10,000 were paid him, was captured near Bogota, N. J., between two trains bristling with shotguns and rifles in the hands of New York detectives, made an attempt on May 25 to extort money by threat from the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad.

On that date Vice President Whaley received a letter threatening to blow up a New Haven train by means of dynamite concealed in a coal tender unless $35,000 was paid to the writer. This letter was received two days after Charles H. Mellen had finished his testimony at Washington concerning the financial affairs of the New Haven. It was turned over to the railroad's detective department. Yesterday the letter was sent to Police Headquarters, and the handwriting was seen to be identical with that in the letters sent to the Cunard Line.

Young Criss is held in the Hackensack Jail as a suspicious person. Steps will probably be taken today to procure extradition papers. Criss said yesterday that he had formed the plan to blackmail the Cunard Line after his imagination had been fired by reading of the Aquitania.

"I thought the steamboat line must be so rich that they would never miss $10,000," he said. It is believed that he wrote to the New Haven official after reading the Mellen testimony of transactions involving many millions of dollars.

Two men were locked up in the Hackensack Jail yesterday on suspicion of being confederates of Criss. They were Joseph Kelly, 38 years old, who lives on East Twenty-third Street, this city, and Peter Mickel of Utica. Detective Schoonmaker of Weehawken who arrested them did not disclose his grounds for believing that they were associated with Criss.

Criss lived with his mother, Mrs. Henry Joseph Burton, a negress who takes in washing, at 197 Duffield Street, Brooklyn. He has an eight-year-old sister, Bertha, who has an eye trouble, contracted, according to the mother, in an orphan asylum. Criss has been earning $4 a week in the printing shop of M. Bernstein at 335 Broadway, Manhattan.

Mrs. Burton told the police yesterday that she supposed the reason her son wanted so much money was that he might publish some negro dialect songs he had composed. The song which was the direct cause of the mobilizing of nearly two dozen detectives and the chartering of a special train was, as nearly as Mrs. Burton could remember, "Mah Quaker Belle," indited to a young negress named Agnes, who came from Philadelphia, and had lived for several months in the apartment above Mrs. Burton's home.

Detectives Gegan and Gilday, who searched the prisoner's room in his mother's house yesterday, found a rejection slip from Munsey's, stating that the manuscript of a short story by Criss had been found unavailable. When Criss was searched at the Hackensack Jail the police found in his pocket a bulky sheaf of penciled copy, which he said was a fiction story he was writing. Other papers found in his room were song verses in the prisoner's handwriting. There were also letters from music publishing firms saying that the songs submitted by Criss would be published only at the author's risk. Other things in the room were time tables of the Delaware, Lackawanna, & Western, the Erie, the New York Central, the Pennsylvania, and the New York, New Haven & Hartford, and maps of British Columbia and Cuba.

Mrs. Burton said the father of the prisoner was her first husband, Joseph Criss, a Patchogue Indian. At a very early age, she said, Joseph had been sent to an orphan asylum while she was ill. He had run away from there and was placed in the Catholic Protectory. He ran away from the Protectory, and with other boys stole a boat at Sheepshead Bay. After that he was placed in a home for incorrigible boys at Bath Beach. Then he was a good boy, she said, for a while, but in 1912 went to Elmira Reformatory after being convicted for receiving stolen goods.

He left Elmira last October and his mother got him a job in a factory in Manhattan. Mrs. Burton said that when Joseph returned from Elmira he was wonderfully skillful in penmanship and used to amuse himself by practicing several kinds of hands. He was home early every evening, she said, and stayed there, engaged chiefly in writing songs or short stories and in drawing designs for mechanical devices, with the help of some knowledge of mechanics which he had picked up at Elmira. For the last two months, she said, he had been employed at the Bernstein printing shop.

M. Bernstein, the printer, said young Criss was bright and industrious. On Thursday Criss was allowed to go away at 5 o'clock, when he pleaded that he had a "weak heart." This gave him time to go to City Hall Park, where he saw a detective place his hand on the statue of Nathan Hale as a signal that the Cunard Line would that night drop the $10,000 from a rear car of a train on the West Shore Railroad.

Second Deputy Commissioner Rubin said yesterday that he had not taken much stock in the threatening letters to the Cunard Line, but that he favored extreme measures to make a few examples of writers of threatening letters. General Agent Charles P. Sumner of the Cunard Line said the threatening letters were not taken seriously by the company, but that they had been anxious to capture the writer.

The investigation made by detectives yesterday did not show that Criss had any confederates or that he had ever had any thought of actually attempting to place dynamite on board any ship.

Woman Drowned Off Liner.

Rather than return to the United States to work as a maid, it was said, Elna Speck, 27 years old, of Helsinfors, Finland, jumped overboard last Sunday morning from the Mauretania of the Cunard Line, which arrived yesterday from Liverpool. She was traveling with her brother Helge, 17 years old, in the second cabin.

FIGHTS TO SAVE OLD ST. ANDREW'S

COST TO CITY, $600 A DAY

Board of Estimate Will Listen to Another Discussion on Committee Report Next Friday.

The report of the Committee on City Plan favoring the acquisition of new land for the Court House site and approving Guy Lowell's preliminary plan for the structure itself, was discussed at a hearing before the Board of Estimate yesterday. The report met with fierce opposition from the Rev. Father Luke J. Evers, rector of St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Church. This edifice will have to go if the plan of the committee is to go through. On account of Father Evers's attitude Borough President McCormack of Richmond refused to sign the report of the City Plan Committee.

After Frank Smith had expressed the feeling of the congregation against any interference with the church, Father Evers urged that the board take no action on the matter until the return of Cardinal Farley from Rome.

"His Eminence," he said, "is the Chairman of the Board of Trustees, and before he left the country he expressed the wish that nothing would be done until he had returned. For ninety-seven years St. Andrew's has been working for God and man, and I do not think it proper to pull down one of God's courts to effect any object of man."

Francis Colety, a lawyer of 160 Broadway, answered Father Evers by declaring that to consult the wishes of any individual, however eminent, was beneath the dignity of the representatives of the people, and Controller Prendergast broke in sharply to say he did not see what could be gained by that line of argument.

President McAneny said the committee had tried to modify the plans so as to leave St. Andrew's where it was. It had been advised by its engineers that it could not be done.

"We can consult the Cardinal on his return," he said, "even if we adopt the resolution now, and can, if necessary, withdraw the church property then. The delay until September would cost the city between $50,000 and $60,000."

Mr. Colety suggested that the church could continue its work equally well in some other part of its parish, but Mr. Smith did not agree with him.

"But why are you wanting to railroad this through now?" asked Father Evers.

"I did not think we were railroading it," replied Mr. McAneny with a smile.

"What is the reason for the haste?" persisted the father.

"That $800 a day," said Mr. McAneny.

James H. Dahm, President-elect of Typographical Union No. 6, spoke for the night workers of the great services rendered to them by the midnight masses at St. Andrew's, and Mr. Smith asked if the suggested approach to the Manhattan Bridge would not wipe out the Church of the Transfiguration.

"I did not know that," said Mr. McAneny. "But fortunately there are so many churches in Manhattan that one cannot help destroying one if any public improvement is adopted."

"Then it can't be an improvement," retorted Mr. Smith.

John T. Hettrick, representing the Hallenbeck Buildings, and other persons interested in the matter were present. When Lawrence M. E. McGuire, President of the Real Estate Board, wished to open up a new phase of the discussion, the Mayor pointed out that there could be no action yesterday and that he would be better advised to postpone his remarks until next Friday. The discussion was then adjourned.

Rotogravure Supplement ✦ ✦ ✦ Sunday, June 14, 1914

THE YOUNG ANGLER

Copyright, by The New York Times Company.

HERE is depicted a situation that will appeal to all who have at some time in their lives boldly replaced the Fourth Reader with Izaak Walton,—or wish they had. It will come as a surprise to know that this is not a picture by a clever artist, but an actual photograph of actual boys and an actual dog. The fact of the clever artist remains unchanged. The excellent composition of the picture would make it seem incredible that this little tableau really happened. It is a picture of one idea; the painfully hesitant figure lingering in the foreground has his mind on that idea; the dog, expressing bottled up enthusiasm from the tip of his tail to his questioning nose, has his mind on that idea, and the central figure of the group,—he has completely succumbed to that idea. And there will be no doubt in any one's mind what that idea is. Through the medium of the most infectious smile that the camera has ever caught the idea leads straight into the background, which is alluring in its vagueness and rich in possibilities. That smile is the bait with which he is hopeful of catching the hesitant lad who is eager to be caught, but is held back by conflicting emotions which no one who was ever a boy will fail to understand.

The art of the photographer has been marvelously aided by the new process of printing, the rotogravure, which The New York Times has introduced to its readers. None of the vitality nor the careful modeling of face or figure have been lost, sharpness of outline has been softened, and detail subordinated in the delicate tones of this new method of picture-printing, which is a combination of the etcher's art with the methods of the camera man.

Rotogravure printing marks a new departure in the field of newspaper reproduction in this country, making possible achievements in the field of pictorial art that ten years ago were not dreamed of.

No picture of the remarkable series which The New York Times has been offering its Sunday readers better illustrates the success of the rotogravure method.

There is no department of our business in which we are more abundantly able to meet every preference than in our Library Furniture—Bookcases and Tables particularly. We have a great number of both, in a complete variety of reproductions and modern designs. Mahogany predominates, and all of it is solid, with construction the most substantial that skilled craftsmanship can produce.

For this week's sale we have reduced prices throughout our stock of Library Tables and Bookcases, to figures which you would hardly think possible for "Furniture of the Better Kind." Library Tables in Solid Mahogany range as low as $27.50. Bookcases down to $21.00. This is an opportunity such as is rarely afforded to secure just the Bookcase or Table you want.

Reduce the Cost of Ice

There is no economy in a cheap Refrigerator which wastes ice. It quickly overbalances any slight saving in the first cost.

BOHN SYPHON REFRIGERATOR

holds ice consumption to the minimum. The Syphon System of rapidly circulating air, and an insulation that provides the highest standard of heat resistance ever attained, combine to hold the temperature in a Bohn Refrigerator at 40°. Ice melts very slowly at this low temperature.

The walls of this Refrigerator have, in addition to the outer and inner cases and Porcelain Enamel lining, 7 heat-resisting layers, including two of Flaxlinum, the exclusive Bohn insulating material. The Syphon System not only holds the temperature down, but keeps the air dry. These are some of the reasons why the Bohn Syphon is installed in practically every dining or refrigerator car in use to-day. The car builders know.

CAUTION!—Do not confuse so-called "elastic enamel," "French enamel," "baked porcelain" and similar linings, which usually are nothing but enamel paint over tin or wood, with the genuine porcelain lining in Bohn Refrigerators.

Model No. 43 Style A, (illustrated above,) size 39x21¼x48½ inches, ice capacity 125 pounds, price $50, is an exceptional value. Our very large line of Refrigerators meets every requirement of both size and price. Call or write for illustrated catalog.

To protect the skin when traveling

More than any other time the skin needs protection during a railway journey.

The dry heat and dust wither it, the soot and grime sink into every pore, imposing a burden too great for the skin to meet and making it excessively sensitive and tender.

Use This Treatment

Bathe your face with Woodbury's Facial Soap several times during a day's journey. Rub its lather gently over and over your face. Rinse and repeat with a fresh lather. Then bathe it for several minutes with clear, cold water—the colder the better.

Woodbury's Facial Soap is the work of an authority on the skin and its needs. This treatment, with its refreshing, beneficial lather, counteracts the irritation caused by the smoke and dust and relieves the "drying" effect of the heat. Used as stated, several times during a day's journey, and you will arrive at the end with your skin as fresh and attractive as when you started.

Make it a habit to use Woodbury's regularly wherever you are. It keeps your skin active so that it can withstand trying conditions, keeps it in perfect health.

PARKER'S METHOD OF HAIR TREATMENT

Special care of the hair at the seashore or mountain should be taken during the summer; neglect may lead to serious complications. My hair treatment stops falling hair quickly. It feeds and strengthens the hair roots—makes the scalp healthy, puts vigor into scanty, dry, brittle, faded hair, gives it splendid gloss and makes it abundant and healthful.

JANE COWL SAYS

Dear Mr. Parker:—Let me thank you for the most beneficial treatments my hair has ever had. All good wishes to you.

HERBEX makes the HAIR HEALTHY, keeps the scalp clean, cool, making the hair soft and fluffy. 50c bottle. Ask for Book, "Healthy Hair."
